LORD HELD IN $25,000 FOR THEFT

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 27.—The old New England whaling city, jealous of its virtues, stood aghast today when Edgar Lord, regarded as a pillar of the best society, was arraigned in police court and charged with looting the New Bedford and Acushnet co-operative banks of which he was treasurer.

It is estimated the defalcations will total $40,000. Lord was held in $25,000 bail for a hearing on September 10. He made no statement in court.

Big and distinguished looking, with his long hair and eyeglasses, the accused man appeared crushed by the blow.

Lord is one of the most accomplished musicians of the State. He is the organist and choir master of the Calvary Baptist Church of Providence, R. I. Before taking this position, two years ago he was the organist of the Trinitarian Church of this city.

He has a wife and four children. They are at his Summer home at Mattapoisett. Mrs. Lord did not learn of the trouble until today. She has not seen her husband since his arrest.

Stealings Cover Ten Years.

The alleged stealings cover ten years. It is believed the method was by means of fake loans.

Lord does not drink. He does not smoke. He does not play cards. He never speculated in stocks, real estate or anything else that promised quick returns. He had no fad which would cost much.

While the banks have been been closed for thirty days it is said that the stockholders will lose nothing. There is enough cash in the reserve and surplus funds to meet the defalcation, it was asserted by officials.

Lord is thirty-nine years old. He is a New Bedford man.

He was graduated from the New Bedford High School. Then he sought a place to make a business career for himself. His one pleasure was music. He played the organ and piano naturally. His talent

Morgan on North Shore Dodges Query of a Bull Mooser

J. Pierpont Morgan, who left New York a few days ago for a North Atlantic coast cruise, came ashore today at Magnolia, made an automobile trip through Marblehead to Peach Point, looked the location over with the eye of a traveled connoisseur and remarked in response to a question that he might build a Summer home there some day.

The great Wall Street magnate secured Herman E. Snow's automobile for his sightseeing. He stopped off at the old Town Hall, looked in at the Lee mansion and other historic places, proceeded to Beverly Farms and then to his yacht.

Snow ran the automobile. He wore a Bull Moose button in his coat.

"Are you a Roosevelt man?" asked Mr. Morgan.

"I am," replied Snow; "aren't you?"

"I am not ready to commit myself yet," the wealthy New Yorker replied, according to Snow.

Mr. Morgan was accompanied by two women and his private secretary.

ACQUITTAL TODAY OF STRIKER LEAVES BUT THREE CASES MORE

Practically the last batch of appealed cases involving Elevated strikers was disposed of today by Judge Dana in the criminal session of the Superior Court. Daniel E. Doherty, charged with throwing missiles at a car on June 7, was found not guilty. The cases of Joseph Gillis, Florence Sullivan and Leo H. Welford were not sent to a jury, the government contending that the evidence against them would not warrant a conviction. There remain on the list but three cases more.

SECRETARY MEYER IS ILL IN BED AT HAMILTON HOME

George von L. Meyer, Secretary of the Navy, who reached his home at Hamilton last night, was confined to his bed by illness today, although it was denied the sickness was dangerous. Over the telephone a member of the household said:

"Mr. Meyer is not well, and is in bed. His illness is not serious."

Mrs. Meyer and her daughters, who have been at Newport, reached home today.

FOSS, BETTER, GOES TO THE STATE HOUSE

Governor Foss, a victim of Vermont green apples, while campaigning there, to such an extent that he was ill at his home in Jamaica Plain yesterday, was able to come to the State House today, but he was a little later than usual. The Foss family is preparing for the wedding of the Governor's son, Noble, who is to marry Miss Katherine Cobb a week from today at Newbury, Vt. The Governor's eldest son, Benjamin, and his wife are on their way from California for the wedding. The family will make the trip to Vermont for the wedding in a private car next Tuesday.

AMERICAN TRANSPORT SINKS AT SHANGHAI

SHANGHAI, China, Aug. 27.—The United States transport Lisconi sank in forty feet of water alongside its wharf today. The vessel was undergoing repairs. The captain believes she can be raised. The cause of the accident has not been ascertained.

$10,000 FIRE AT CONEY ISLAND

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Fire at the entrance of one of the large Coney Island amusement resorts caused excitement among the crowds there. The blaze started near the congested Bowery section, and was licking around the entrance of the amusement park when those inside learned of their peril. The loss was $10,000.

Norman H. White of Brookline today gave out a statement in which he asserted that he was not a candidate for any office this Fear, but would support the Progressive movement and its candidates.

ROOSEVELT PROMISES TO TELL ALL

OYSTER BAY, Aug. 27.—Theodore Roosevelt again today declared not only his willingness, but his eagerness, to make public every scrap of evidence in his possession in regard to any connection between the campaign fund raised for the election to the presidency in 1904 and the Standard Oil interests. He said today:

If Mr. Hearst will let me know within a year or a year and a half of the time I wrote any letter pertaining to the Standard Oil Company, such as he refers to in his cabled message from London, I will be glad to go through my files and produce the copy of it if it is there.

Roosevelt wanted it made plain that his sincere in his purpose to produce any possible Standard Oil correspondence if it is indicated what letters are desired.

At Work on Letter.

The ex-President is working on the letter he is to send to Senator Clapp defining facts relating to the Standard Oil Company contribution in 1904. He said today he would finish the letter in time to give it out for publication before leaving home tomorrow night. He said:

In the letter I am going to reproduce the letter I wrote to Judge Parker in the last days of the campaign of 1904, regarding the Oil contribution. It will be recalled that Mr. Parker charged that the Standard Oil had given $100,000 to my campaign. After having satisfied myself, through the statement of Mr. Cortelyou that no such contribution had been made I replied to Judge Parker.

Another letter I shall embody in my letter to Mr. Clapp is one I wrote to "Jimmy" Sherman, the Vice-Presi-

Haverstock's Wives in Court to Press Charges of Bigamy

Linde G. Josiyn of Wakefield appeared before Judge Bruce in the Malden court today ready to testify as the principal witness against her husband. Her first husband was a lightkeeper at Thatcher's Island. Shortly after her marriage she instituted bigamy proceedings against him.

She married Haverstock a short time later and now says that he, too, has a wife living. The woman who claims to be the first wife of Haverstock was also in court. She says that she married the defendant in New Bedford in 1884. Neither woman testified today.

Seek Peace in Touraine Strike

Manager and Waiters Confer

STRIKING WAITERS AND ORGANIZER BLOCHLINGER

Wages and Reinstatement of All the Strikers Now the Big Points at Issue.

Settlement of the Hotel Touraine strike now hangs on the two points of wages and of reinstatement of all strikers.

Six representatives of the strikers' union, accompanied by Edward Blochlinger, the New York organizer, and by Thomas C. Connolly, their counsel, held a conference for one and a half hours today with Manager Edgar Pierce of the Touraine, in Mr. Pierce's office.

When the men came out Mr. Blochlinger said:

"There is no formal settlement yet, but we are to meet Mr. Pierce tomorrow morning for final answer. The conference was satisfactory and I believe a settlement can be reached without the strike spreading."

Manager Pierce said:

"I have received the demands of the strikers. With the exception of two particulars, the demands contain nothing but what I had decided to grant the employes before the union was formed."

One of the two hitches in the settlement proceeding arises from the strikers' demand for a weekly wage of $10 for waiters, instead of $30 a month, which they now receive.

On that point Manager Pierce said:

"So far as I know, $30 a month is the usual waiters' pay in first-class hotels in Boston and New York. The strikers' committee told me that the New York hotels are now paying $40 a month. I will investigate that."

The other point which Manager Pierce wishes time to think over is on the reinstatement of all the strikers. He said:

"I have not decided whether I shall put the strikers back or not."

The Touraine was forced to close its main dining room shortly before noon today as a result of the strike of the waiters and cooks. The lights in the dining room were extinguished and two maids stood at the entrance. They directed guests to the German room in the basement for luncheon.

Doesn't Oppose Union.

It was intimated by Mr. Pierce that the trouble would be quickly adjusted to the satisfaction of the men. Pierce was told what the demands were and he said he thought the differences could be fixed up. He said he was not opposed to a union.

Sixteen waiters in the coffee room today joined the strikers. The strikers said that this swelled the force that walked out to eighty-five, while the management of the hotel places the figures at sixty-five.

About the hotel today were between twenty-five and thirty pickets. Two police men from the Lagrange street station kept the pickets on the move, although they were not driven from the neighborhood.

Guests of the hotel were served breakfast somewhat tardily today, but nobody went hungry. Claude M. Hart, the general manager, said things were going pretty smoothly and he would be able to get all the help he needed, even though some of it was not as skilled as the workers who quit.

It was believed other waiters would join their dissatisfied brethren. It also was expected by the strikers that there would be a similar strike at the Parker House and Young's, these hotels being under the same management as the Touraine. Another hotel, it was reported, might be affected, too.

Manager Hart said today about half his cooks and waiters had quit.

Ernest W. Pitman, head of the E. W. Pitman Company, one of the largest textile mill builders of New England, committed suicide at his home at Andover, it became known today, because he had been subpoenaed before today's session of the Suffolk County Grand Jury to tell what he knew in connection with the planting of dynamite in Lawrence at the time of the big mill strike.

John J. Breen, formerly a member of the Lawrence School Committee, was tried and found guilty of placing the dynamite at the various places where it was found, but he denied the charges against him.

TO HAVE BEEN WITNESS TODAY.

Breen testified before the Grand Jury today. It is believed the story he told of this startling phase of the bitter textile fight in Lawrence was of a most sensational character.

Breen was fined $500 in the Salem Superior Criminal Court. He paid the fine. In passing sentence Judge Brown said:

"If what I hear is true it was a foolish attempt on the part of any man to thus help a friend."

Judge Brown made no explanation of his words. Whether they in anyway referred to Pitman is not known.

Pitman was found dead at his home today. The police were called in. They made a hasty examination and reported that the man had killed himself by shooting.

Witness Today.

No one could be found about the Pitman home or among his friends who could give a cause for the man's self-destruction. Afterward it became known in Boston that he was to be called today to testify.

Many persons believed the dynamite incident was closed with the fining of Breen. When grand jury attaches called the name of Pitman today it was learned for the first time the dynamite mystery was being investigated secretly and that Pitman was one of the witnesses summoned.

The word that he had killed himself was reported to the grand jury.

Pitman Rich Man.

Pitman was a wealthy man. He built the Wood and Ayer mills, two of the largest structures in Lawrence and two of the biggest textile concerns in the world.

He was regarded as one of the greatest experts in textile mill construction in the country. He was forty-five years old.

The contractor married Miss Pike, a daughter of William Pike, a Lawrence builder. Through his father-in-law, Pitman became interested in mill construction.

Breen was tried in Salem last May. He was found guilty of "planting dynamite" on May 14. The man was indicted on three counts, but was found guilty on one only, that of placing the dynamite where it was found, for the purpose of doing damage to the men who were out on strike.

On the counts that he intended to injure the persons on whose property the dynamite was found he was found not guilty.

The dynamite was found at a cobbler's shop and at a tailor's shop. The strikers denied they had placed the dynamite there and charged at once it had been "planted" to injure them in their fight.

Breen's arrest took place eleven days after the discovery of the dynamite. Witnesses testified a man answering his description was seen at both the places where dynamite was found. Breen is an undertaker. It was testified the paper wrapped about some of the explosive was torn from a magazine such as is taken only by undertakers.

Mill Agents Called.

Several Lawrence mill agents and treasurers appeared at the Court House and were called before the Grand Jury. It is presumed they were questioned as to their knowledge, if any, of the planting of the dynamite.

It was believed about the Court House that the special Grand Jury took up the dynamiting case as the result of the testimony of Captain Proctor of the State Police, who testified at the Breen trial as to what Breen had told him.

Breen, according to Proctor, said he was called to Boston by a telephone message; that he went to Rowe's wharf, where he met a man who gave him a letter; this letter named the places in Lawrence where dynamite would be found. Breen told Inspector Rooney, a friend on the Boston police force, about the letter.

BIG CROWD OUT AT READVILLE

READVILLE RACE TRACK, Aug. 27.—Ideal weather conditions greeted the horsemen in the opening day of the Grand Circuit races here. A record breaking crowd of racing enthusiasts turned out in order to witness the sport and some spirited battles on the turf were anticipated by the lovers of the turf game.

Interest, of course, centered in the great American trotting derby which was slated to be run off today. This is one of the classics of the Grand Circuit and some thrilling races were expected. Some of the fastest trotters in the world will battle for the $10,000 purse.

With a wonderful field of starters, there were many who believed that the record for the distance would go by the board. The favorites will not have things all their own way, as many of the lesser lights will be greatly aided by handicaps in the final mile and a half dash.

It looked like old times at this famous race track. Last year the rain put a damper on the Grand Circuit races here, but this year everything pointed toward a successful meeting.

Ask Restaurateurs to Join Women in H. C. of L. Battle

If you were a restaurant keeper in Boston and were interested in selling hash at a quarter a spoonful——

And if you were invited to contribute two dollars to an organization which is fighting the high cost of living——

Wouldn't IT JAR you?

The Woman's Homestead Association, of which Mrs. Charlotte Smith is president, sent a circular to Boston restaurateurs which begins thus:

The Woman's Homestead Association appeals to the proprietors of the restaurants of Greater Boston to become members of the said association. The membership fee is $2 per annum. The money thus collected is to be used towards fighting the high cost of living.

As one effective way of reducing the high cost of living would be to scale down the prices in many Boston restaurants, it is figured that the institution of the W. H. A. may strike the restaurant men as an unusual opportunity.

CHICAGO CARMEN WIN WAGE SCALE

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—A new wage scale has been agreed to by union officers and representatives of the street car companies. The scale will be submitted to the employes of the two surface lines for a vote within the next few days. Union officers say they are certain that the new scale will be adopted. Mayor Harrison acted as mediator at the conferences.

UNITED SHOE SEEKS PEACE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—That the United Shoe Machinery Company is willing to compromise with the Department of Justice on the civil suits to dissolve the corporation is indicated in a telegram received today at the department from the company's attorney, Charles F. Choate.

Mr. Choate's telegram states a conference with the Attorney-General is deemed advisable at this time and "if it is possible would like to see you Wednesday or Thursday."

Mr. Wickersham will be away until October 1.

An Example of Automatic Price Reductions

Take the lot of Dresses advertised today at 3.25. They went on sale Aug. 19.

If they do not sell out quickly, here's what will happen:

On Sept. 5 they will be reduced 25% to 2.43.
On Sept. 12 they will be reduced 50% to 1.62.
On Sept. 19 they will be reduced 75% to 81c.
On Sept. 26 they will be given away.

Only one way to avoid these reductions—to make the first price so extraordinarily low the lot will sell out before the reductions are scheduled to begin.

LORD HELD IN BANK ROBBERY

was cultivated. He soon became very proficient and was looked upon as the musical genius of this city.

At Work in Bank.

His first employment was with the New Bedford Gas Company. He made a good impression. This company started the first co-operative bank in this city. The business of the bank was carried on in a portion of the gas company building. This was the New Bedford Bank. The Acushnet followed.

When the first bank was started the gas officials looked about for a bright young man to run the concern. They decided on Lord. He was made the secretary, then the treasurer. He mastered all the details of the bank—knew more about it than any other person.

As a banker and musician everybody trusted Lord. He married Miss Gertrude Hardy, one of the most charming young women of the city. They live in a pretty little house at No. 403 Union street. This is in a quiet residential section. They have four children. The home was regarded as one of the happiest, one of the most ideal in the city.

Lord is well known by sight. There is hardly a boy or girl of New Bedford with musical talent or inclination that has not been befriended by Lord. He was always on the lookout to do something of this kind. He is companionable and genial.

When he appeared in court his friends seemed to accept the shock with less grace than the accused man. Charles H. Price, secretary of the banks, and Lord's closest friend, was among those in court. He was downcast as though the prisoner were his brother.

Books Mixed Up.

Lord denied that he had stolen the money, but he did not go into details. It was explained by the bank officials that the books had been handled so cleverly that probably no one except Lord could straighten them out.

It is expected Lord will be asked to help with the books and that he will respond. He did not manifest any bitterness at the proceedings. He kept writing over and over again to his friends that his accounts were not short.

But this was denied by Charles W. Lewis, the bank examiner. It was said by the officials that the alleged signing again nine years ago with a fake loan of $4,000.

But the money borrowed from a co-operative bank carries with it 5 per cent compound interest. It is wonderful how amounts will climb lent at this rate. Lord found himself, it is claimed, unable to pay back the money—the cost of living grew higher, his family demanded more and there were other expenses, probably, that have as yet not been explained—and it is charged more fake loans were made to meet the emergencies.

The banks were examined every six months. Why, is being asked, were the shortages alleged not discovered long ago?

If the defalcation amounts to $40,000, as is claimed, Lord must have concluded long ago that he was hopelessly in the meshes of crime.

Lord Locked Up.

It was not believed bail could be obtained in so large a sum as $25,000 for Lord. He was locked up in the House of Correction. Secretary Price made this statement:

"The banks will not be embarrassed. The exact amount of the shortages cannot be told. But the surpluses will probably be wiped out. Shareholders need have no fear for their savings."

The assets of the two banks total more than $1,000,000. Those of the New Bedford bank are $681,375 and of the Acushnet bank $468,888. The reserve of the New Bedford bank is $12,059 and the surplus, $13,228; the surplus of the Acushnet bank is $3,912 and the guaranteed fund, $4,776. The amount for the protection of the shareholders totals about $36,000, and this amount Secretary Price said would be wiped out by the shortage.

LOEB DEFENDS ROOSEVELT

dent, about the Harriman episode. That letter gave my version of Mr. Harriman's visit to the White House.

I am looking further into my files for other letters that will show conclusively what my stand was in the Standard Oil matter.

Colonel Roosevelt corrected a statement attributed to Collector Loeb, in which the former secretary was made to say that he called up Cortelyou at Roosevelt's request after the publication of Harriman's letter to Sydney Webster. Loeb, according to a published report, said Colonel Roosevelt desired to know from Cortelyou if he recalled what transpired at the Harriman visit.

The report made it appear that Loeb had spoken of Harriman calling in reference to the Standard Oil contribution.

"That's all wrong," remarked Colonel Roosevelt. "Mr. Harriman's call was not in connection with Standard Oil, but referred to all he wanted from the national committee for the New York State campaign. Mr. Loeb did not ask Mr. Cortelyou about Mr. Harriman. When he called Cortelyou on the telephone it was to ask him about the reports that Standard Oil had made a contribution to my campaign. Mr. Cortelyou's reply as conveyed to me by Mr. Loeb—and in this no bears me out—was that none had been received from the Standard Oil."

Colonel Roosevelt also wanted a false impression which, he said, had crept into print concerning the visit of John D. Archbold and Henry H. Rogers, straightened out. Loeb was quoted as saying the colonel explained Archbold and Rogers had made a midnight call the night after election.

"They made no such visit to me," said Roosevelt. "They did call at the White House one afternoon, a year after the election. They wanted me to stop the Department of Justice from going on with the Standard Oil investigation. I declined to interfere."

"I DO NOT REMEMBER ANY LETTERS, BUT—" SAYS COL. ROOSEVELT

OYSTER BAY, Aug. 27.—"If Brother Hearst has any letters bearing upon my acts, during my presidency toward the Standard Oil Trust, let him produce them. I am willing that anything I wrote to anybody on that or any subject be made public."

That was Colonel Roosevelt's reply to the challenge of William Randolph Hearst that the ex-President make a fair and honorable acknowledgment of his relation to the Standard Oil in the 1904 presidential campaign.

The ex-President read the cabled statement of Mr. Hearst from London, in which Mr. Hearst made it known that he would "tell the truth" about the Standard Oil and its connection with the Roosevelt campaign, if Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Parnes, Mr. Archbold and Mr. Sibley, the Standard's financial agents, do not.

Roosevelt appeared to be in a quandary over the hint that hitherto unpublished letters in the Standard oil embroglio might be brought into the limelight. He assumed not to know exactly what Mr. Hearst had in store.

The intimation by Mr. Hearst that it would be well for Colonel Roosevelt to confess to his part in the Standard Oil affair nettled the ex-President.

"I have nothing to conceal, absolutely nothing," exclaimed the Colonel, with spirit. "If any man has a letter of mine which is in anything pertaining to the Standard Oil let him produce it. Everything I did was as open as the day. I took a decided stand against the Standard Oil's contribution to my campaign, and I have made it plain that I stoutly opposed taking Standard Oil money. I was assured that none was taken."

Mr. Hearst's allusion that "Mr. Roosevelt can boast of a belated honesty" was a thrust that caused Roosevelt to observe: "In the most plain and bragging of my honesty. In the second place, my honesty about Standard Oil or anything else has not been belated."

Roosevelt turned suddenly to ask if anyone knew what letters "Brother" Hearst, as he referred to him, might have in store relating to Standard Oil affair. Nobody could tell him.

"Well my letters will be produced—all of them that bear upon this matter," elucidated the ex-President. "If Mr. Hearst does not produce them I will. I intend to have everything made public. If I had been given the opportunity to appear before the Senate investigating committee I'd have revealed everything. I'll deal with it all now in my letter to Senator Clapp.

"I do not remember whether or not there were letters in which I spoke of Standard Oil written by me to anybody connected with the Standard Oil corporation," said the Colonel, "but I do know there are no letters of any kind in the possession of Mr. Hearst or any one else which the public is not welcome to."

CHAPTER IX

The New Filene Store

Broadening Our Scope to Include All Made-Ready Wear for Women

TWO distinct achievements of the new store relate to women's made-ready apparel: Wider price-range without disturbing the present equilibrium of values; added lines to round out wardrobe selection.

The first of these things transpires automatically as a result of the system on which we proceed.

The second has been a fixed part of our planning from the very inception of the new era.

Thousands of women who have looked to us for their dresses and gowns, suits, coats, furs, waists, lingerie, hosiery, gloves, neckwear, veils, skirts, knit underwear, etc., have urged us to provide millinery, motoring and steamship wearables, shoes, toilet goods, handkerchiefs, handbags, parasols, umbrellas, leather goods, luggage.

The old store could not comply because of space restrictions.

The new store will comply in a big, broad way.

We shall outfit women in made-ready apparel from the tips of their bonnets to the tips of their toes.

To do this we have drawn not only from the ordained centres of style and worthiness in this country, but from abroad.

On the sixth floor are salons for imported and American trimmed millinery, with convenient workrooms. Here will be found also untrimmed hats and millinery materials.

We shall be enabled to offer New England women the right foreign modes contemporaneously with their appearance in fashion centres abroad.

For this we take nobody's written or cabled word. Our personal organizations in Paris and elsewhere do more than note styles—they include style creators of international repute.

On the fifth floor is a specialty shop for women who motor, women given to athletics, women who sail the seas. Dainty, exclusive little gatherings of smart coats, hats, bonnets, veils and other accessories of travel.

In addition to the millinery on the sixth floor, untrimmed hats and millinery materials will be found on the first.

Here again the qualities of distinctiveness and originality will appear strongly.

Evening head dresses, theatre caps, boudoir caps, corsage bouquets and decorative flowers will be provided.

The new shoe shops for women, misses and children are more than five times the size of the present ones.

Each of the other new things—toilet goods, handkerchiefs, parasols, umbrellas, handbags, leather goods and the like—will be so placed that every facility for leisurely and right selection will be provided.

And we shall do more than clothe women. We shall look after their personal needs.

Here they will find restaurant, rest rooms, a lavatory on every floor, with matron in attendance, hair-dressing and manicuring salon, glove and gown cleaning service, shopping bureau, personal service bureau for the obtaining of theatre, steamship or railway tickets, telephones, telegraph office, and even the Marconi wireless buzzing away on the roof.

To say nothing of a world of toys for the kiddies in their very own playroom.

BELATED, BUT WINS BRIDE

Leo F. McCready, chief steward of the Plant Line steamer A. W. Perry, and Miss Katherine Marks of Miami, Fla., were married today by the Rev. Fr. Ryan at St. Cecilia's Church, Back Bay.

The wedding was performed after Bishop Anderson had granted a special dispensation. The young couple have met with several obstacles since an attempt was made to secure a marriage license. The wedding was originally scheduled to take place in Brooklyn a week ago, but Old Father Neptune intervened. The A. W. Perry was outfitted about and the bridegroom did not appear on time for the ceremony. The bride accompanied by her mother came to this city and met young McCready when he landed at the dock. The bride was attended today by Miss Lena Shields of Miami.

Frank Sullivan of Boston was the best man. The bride was prettily attired in white and wore a big white picture hat. After the ceremony the couple went direct to the A. W. Perry. They sail today for Halifax, where they will make their home.

KAISER, WORSE, TO GIVE UP PROPOSED SWITZERLAND TRIP

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—Fears over the condition of Emperor William are growing, and a bulletin from the physicians in attendance was anxiously awaited in all circles today. The proposed trip to Switzerland, which was scheduled to start on September 2 is now expected to be cancelled despite the announcement made twenty-four hours ago that the Emperor was determined to go. The feverish symptoms went down and the swelling in the throat abated somewhat, but the muscles still remain so stiff that movement of the head and neck is hampered. The attending doctors are said to feel that these symptoms are but precursors of more alarming manifestations.

Bathing Suit Fads Shock Narragansett Pier's Prim Folks

NARRAGANSETT PIER, Aug. 27.—Narragansett—having focused the eyes of all New England in her direction with the gayest of all Summer balls, at this gayest of all Summer resorts—now lays claim to another title.

The Rhode Island resort, its habitues declare, may fairly claim to be the Ostend of America. For its bathing suits are the most daring on the Atlantic seaboard of these United States. Those who have been elsewhere, and know, vouch for this assertion.

Short skirts, tight ones, and then ones—these are the three kinds in favor. Narragansett hasn't seen the one-piece bathing suit yet, but it's waiting. It has seen everything else—even that markedly two-piece suit that leaves a distinct white line above the silken hose and beneath the skirt's scant folds.

The young society women here have developed much skill and daring as swimmers and aquatic acrobats. It is common, during the bathing hours, when the surf is thickly dotted with bluebloods and near-bluebloods with blue noses, to behold graceful girls in scant bathing suits poised on the shoulders of escorts or life guards.

Scant skirts are the correct style. The material of the surf rigs is fine and silky and the skirts are built on lobbily lines. Perhaps the skirts are too short—or else the stockings—for there is usually a distinct gap between the two.

Several bathers went about as near the one-piece bathing suit limit as they dared. A tall and shapely young woman of perhaps thirty, with a sheath skirt effect and fancy hosiery, strolled up and down with her hair flowing in the breeze. It was beautiful hair, falling below her waist, and she wanted others to admire it—but a picture of her wouldn't be mailable without an envelope.

Mrs. Belmont to Give Midnight Ball

Sausages Feature of Strange Menu

Guests at Suffrage Dinner to Honor Miss Milholland Will Sport on Newport Beach.

NEWPORT, Aug. 27.—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's novel midnight supper and "Coney Island" ball tonight has this fashion resort a-quiver with pleasant anticipation. The original function is in honor of Mrs. Belmont's protege, Miss Inez Milholland, of England.

Supper begins at 12:30 a. m.

Linked sausage will be the principal feature of the menu.

Young women, instead of men, will serve the food.

Guests will ride on the merry-go-round, patronize the rifle range, try to ring the cane and otherwise enjoy themselves in the Bowery section by electric light.

Mrs. Belmont will entertain two hundred guests. The event begins at 11 o'clock. The dining room will be a-flutter and aflame with patriotic colors. Choice flowers will adorn the tables. This is what they will eat:

MENU.
Bouillon in cups.
Chicken salad.
Imported sausages.

The beach, roped off so that the guests will have exclusive use of it, will be illuminated with Chinese lanterns. The sight-seeing will follow. The photograph galleries will be going full blast and it is expected that some charming picture post cards will be obtained.

A fine orchestra has been secured for the dancing that is to follow in the pavilion. The general opinion here is that the "suffrage ball," as the event is referred to, will entitle Mrs. Belmont to the blue ribbon in the class of unusual entertainments.

ALIEN GIRL SENT HOME THIRD TIME

For the third time in three years Miss Esea Demitgerdian, an eighteen-year-old Armenian girl, was deported today. She left her home in Harpoot, Turkey, three years ago, and arrived in Portland, Me. She was found to be suffering from trachoma, and was deported. She stayed in England three years, receiving treatment. She appeared in New York six months ago, and was again sent back. Last Thursday she arrived again, this time in Boston. She appeared cheerful when told that she must go back again. The Arabic was delayed in leaving by the absence of the wireless operator, who disappeared yesterday.

NO BECKER PLEA BEFORE SEPT. 3

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Lieutenant Charles Becker, through his lawyer, John F. McIntyre, sprang a surprise on Judge Mulqueen and the District Attorney's office in Part III. of General Sessions today, when, on Becker's arraignment, an order stopping all proceedings until September 31 was produced.

The order was signed by Supreme Court Justice Amend. It was secretly procured by Mr. McIntyre yesterday. In substance, it stated that Becker should not be arraigned today to plead to the indictment charging him with the murder of Gambler Herman Rosenthal until Sept. 3. At that time Supreme Court Justice Goff begins hearing the "John Doe" proceedings in connection with the Rosenthal murder and charges of grafting. Judge Mulqueen remanded the prisoner to await the further order of the court.

Rich land owners whose properties lie in the Tenderloin were in a panic today over the threat of Police Commissioner Waldo to make public a list of gambling houses, together with a list of the owners of the building.

Later in the week, he said, he would probably publish a list of disorderly houses. He tried to have both lists ready at the same time, but there has been a great deal of work verifying the data.

Two men suspected of being "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie," the missing gunmen under indictment for the murder of gambler Herman Rosenthal, are today in custody at Fonda, Montgomery County, N. Y., where they were arrested last night.

The arrests have brought about a controversy between two detectives in the employ of William J. Burns and the Fonda authorities. According to a long-distance telephone report made to their chief early today, two Burns operatives arrested the men after trailing them from Albany. On the other hand, Sheriff E. K. Kutlebaum declared over the telephone that the suspects were not the missing gun fighters for whom District Attorney Whitman has offered a reward of $3,000, but were two street vendors, who were locked up by Deputy Sheriff McLaughlin for violating a village ordinance for peddling without licenses.

The two suspects were arrested at a Fonda hotel, where they had registered as "L. L. Goldenberg of Brooklyn" and "H. H. Kreger of Patterson." Burns admitted without hesitation that his detectives had made the arrests at Fonda and from descriptions of the men he felt sure that the wanted gunmen had at last been run to earth.

NO BULL MOOSER, SAYS WILLIAMS

George Fred Williams, who returned today from a tour of Europe, denied that he had switched over to the Bull Moose party and had pledged his support to Colonel Roosevelt. He admitted that he had been to Oyster Bay and talked with Colonel Roosevelt, but declared that he would refuse no candidate that courtesy if he asked him to meet for a conference, as Colonel Roosevelt had.

FERBER OUT AS AID TO FRENCH

When the reporters "covering" the central postoffice building for the various Boston papers went into the office of United States District Attorney Asa P. French today they were given a brief typewritten statement announcing the resignation of Assistant United States District Attorney J. Bernard Ferber and the appointment of James S. Allen, Jr., to succeed him.

Mr. Ferber's resignation, the statement read, is to take effect September 1. The reason is his wish to devote his entire time to his private practice.

That the intention of Mr. Ferber to resign was known beforehand was indicated by the fact that the appointment of Mr. Allen as his successor was made by Attorney-General Wickersham and was announced with Mr. Ferber's notice of resignation.

The appointment of Mr. Allen was made upon the recommendation of Mr. French, with whose private law office Mr. Allen is now connected. Mr. Allen was born in East Bridgewater, is thirty-five years old and lives in Winchester.

WOMAN KILLED BY B. & M. TRAIN AT WINCHESTER

Mrs. Hannah Shattuck, seventy years old, of No. 28 Concord avenue, Nashua, N. H., was struck and killed by the 8:14 train at Winchester railroad station of the Boston & Maine railroad today. A year ago an elderly woman was killed at this same grade crossing under circumstances similar to this. Mrs. Shattuck had been visiting her son-in-law, F. E. Belcher of Winchester. She started alone today for Winchester station, to take the 8:14 train to Nashua. She approached the station from the lubound side just as the train was coming on the outbound tracks. Mrs. Shattuck tried to get across the tracks in front of the train, as she could be on the outbound side when the train stopped.

A. O. H. OPENS BIG CONVENTION

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 27.—A big reception and ball opened the State convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Massachusetts in this city last evening. More than 1,000 men and women delegates attended from all sections of the State. The delegates are loud in their praise of the splendid arrangements of the Springfield committee on reception.

The formal exercises were preceded today by a high mass at St. Michael's Cathedral, which Most Rev. Dr. Beaven, Bishop of Springfield, was the celebrant. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Thomas F. Cummings, D. D.

"Count of Luxembourg" at Tremont

Newest Waltz, With a Musical Comedy, Straight from Franz Lehar at Vienna.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The newest waltz, with a musical comedy dancing on the end of it, arrived at the Tremont last evening, and it came straight from Franz Lehar of Vienna, who once completely upset us with a three-four tune called "The Merry Widow."

"The Count of Luxembourg," which had its American premiere at the Tremont last evening, was well supplied with Mr. Lehar's passionate melodies. As a matter of musical composition, the effort of Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger to give this European entertainment an American hearing, passed off successfully. Every one concerned in the production sings and is grateful to the composer, for he held his own in rather decent shape against the hearty odds of his tremendously triumphant "Merry Widow."

Not as much may be said of the book, which was dressed up for the American ear by Glen Macdonough. For the most part the story was dull and not especially well acted.

The evening at the Tremont was not without its profits, however, for in Miss Ann Swinburne was discovered a new jewel in musical comedy. Miss Swinburne, whose voice was as fresh and pure as a June morning, settled gracefully in the spirit of the delightful Lehar music. She was natural and unaffected, and kept the audience of its balance with the most promising voice musical comedy has provided in years. The performance last evening was Miss Swinburne's by a wide margin.

Ensemble Is Pleasing.

The ensemble, too, was pleasing to both the eye and the ear. The fanciful melodies of the piece were splendidly suited to dances, marches and ballroom arranged by Julian Mitchell. There was ample evidence of Mr. Mitchell's conscientious labors. The costuming was in good taste, and the big chorus attended to its business with more intelligence than we have noticed in that direction for some time. Whatever else may be said of "The Count of Luxembourg," the rank and file of the organization was neither idle nor careless.

While the waltz number, upon which the piece leans most heavily for support, may not be classed with its popular predecessor by the same composer, it was, nevertheless, drawn into useful service and made serviceable by Miss Swinburne. Her partner, George Leon Moore, was somewhat handicapped by the extraordinary staging and personal qualities of his mate. Miss Swinburne would allow no serious competition—and there was none.

Mr. Moore did the romantic tenor with a great deal of effect. One perhaps, to the deadly lines imposed upon the role. No man could appear romantic in some of the situations forced upon Mr. Moore. His singing voice had no particular flaws, but his environments were fatal to impressive heroics.

"The Count of Luxembourg" was rather dull in a comedy sense, although Frank Moulan and Fred Walton proved themselves industrious laborers in a barren field. Their faithful efforts deserved better results. In his opening number, "I Am in Love," Mr. Moulan gave promise of keeping the evening sunny and bright—but the promise was false. Mr. Walton, too, reached the audience with one number, "In Society," which he sang with Frances Cameron. Much could have been forgiven if he had refrained from unloosening that ancient joke about water being "the stuff they push under bridges." That was too old to be out so late in the evening.

"The Count of Luxembourg" is a big entertainment—big in every detail. While its music will take care of itself at all times, there is plenty of room for a few flashes of lively comedy. The fun specialists on the K. & E. payroll should be able to fix up a little thing like that before the week is ended.

Miss Swinburne, however, needs no attention from any source. She has her portion of the performance in perfect control.

'OVER NIGHT' IS GREETED AGAIN

"Over Night," described on the playbills as "one long, lingering laugh," returned to the Shubert Theatre last night. There was a long, lingering laugh of eight weeks ago, this play was produced here a year ago, and last night the laugh started again. Boston likes to have a good play return and a crowded house last night gave evidence of that fact.

Mr. Bartholomae's comedy loses nothing in its present presentation. As excellent cast has been provided. Thomas Emory, as Richard Kettle, and Arthur Aylsworth, as the hotel clerk, are old friends, but the rest of the cast is new to Boston. The story unfolded behind the footlight, as nearly everybody knows, deals with the two bridal couples who start their honeymoon with a trip on a Hudson River steamboat.

They become separated; that is, one groom is left behind with the other groom's bride. The complications that ensue on the steamboat and at the Rip Van Winkle Inn later on cause the long, lingering laugh. Richard Kettle, who has always relied upon his mother, is mated to a strapping young suffragist (Ada Stevings Darling, who is built like a center rush, weds a demure little miss (Blanche Lariviere).

The trials of young Kettle with Darling's wife are many, but at last, of course, things are straightened out to everyone's satisfaction. Mr. Emery duplicated the hit he made on his previous visit here, but he was forced to share honors with Miss Lariviere, who proved to be a very dainty and winsome bride. Mr. Aylsworth made the most of his well written part as hotel clerk.

As Percy Darling Mr. Kelly's size and action carried him along in good style. Parts like Caroline Patches, the maiden aunt, are doubtless written to be overplayed and Miss Florence Carle made the most of her opportunities. Mr. Gilten, as a groom, and Miss Northland were fair and Kettle and Darling was pleasing. These with Sol Aitken, as Professor Diggs, a hypnotist, had the bulk of the work to do. The play was well acted and its performance last night was "one long, continuous laugh."

May Robson for Hollis.

May Robson, who will complete her two weeks' engagement in "A Night Out" at the Park Theatre next Saturday evening, will move into the Hollis on Labor Day. The coming of Rose Stahl in "Maggie Pepper" prevents Miss Robson from continuing her visit at the Park.

Paragon Park.

The new feature in the cabaret at Paragon Park this week is "The Four English Rosebuds," an act that made a good impression upon yesterday's audiences. Other features, both new and old, keep the cabaret moving at high speed all evening.

Bass Point.

Excursionists and recreation seekers are crowding Bass Point and enjoying the shore dinners that give the place its reputation. The sail down the harbor to Bass Point is one of the most delightful of the many going out of Boston.

Mrs. Hibbard Makes Hit at Keith's in a One-Act Play

It was a most flattering reception that Mrs. George A. Hibbard, widow of Boston's former Mayor, received at Keith's when she appeared in the first performance of her new play, "A Queen's Messenger."

Those who watched Mrs. Hibbard's work were surprised at her dramatic talent as exhibited in this new vehicle. From the very minute she entered the scene she held her audience's attention. There was not a moment when she lost or lessened her power. The support of Wyrley Birch did not tend to make it any easier for Mrs. Hibbard, as it did not seem that Mr. Birch was really fitted for the part which is given him. But with so talented an actress as Mrs. Hibbard on the stage it mattered little what her support.

Mrs. Hibbard carried the piece to a striking climax. Half a dozen bouquets were passed over the footlights.

Sharing honors on the bill with Mrs. Hibbard was Henry E. Dixey. As a "new recruit" to vaudeville Dixey is about the best find that managers have made in their search for novelties. There is no doubting the fact that it takes "some actor" to come before the footlights and keep an audience in laughter for twenty-five minutes by sheer legitimate acting. Dixey did this at Keith's. His impersonations covered about every field from sleight-of-hand to tragedy, and Dixey is a master of them all.

One of the most pleasing acts of the long and varied bill was that of John C. Rice and Sally Cohen. Their sketch, "The Path of the Primroses," is a touch of real life behind the scenes, and an absorbing tale of human interest. It is teeming with genuine comedy also, that brought tears of laughter from the audience. Mr. Rice and Miss Cohen are capital actors and excellent comedians.

Ben Lion made a hit singing "Nobody Loves a Fat Man," while rivulets of perspiration ran down his cheeks. Adele Ferguson and Edna Northland were fair and Sully and Hussey got a lot of good laughs in their sketch, "The Sportsman and the Valet." The Apollo trio posed as Grecian statues, and the Lavan trio was good in gymnastic novelties. Among the other attractions were the four musical Gordon Highlanders. The weekly Pathe review was as usual of absorbing interest.

All in all the man who arranged the bill this week gave Keith's patrons one of the best that has been seen at the popular playhouse in many a week. There was not a vacant seat in the house.

Convict Ship.

The convict ship, Success, remains at Watson Bridge, where thousands of visitors are viewing with interest the old-fashioned implements of torture that were used upon marine prisoners a century ago.

Globe Theatre.

The new bill at the Globe Theatre yesterday was enlivened by several vaudeville numbers that were novel and interesting. Besides the vaudeville there was a long list of new motion pictures and an attractive selection of illustrated songs.

Hub Theatre.

There was a complete change of programme in pictures and illustrated songs at the Hub Theatre yesterday.

NATIONAL OPENS WITH BIG BILL

So many people attended the reopening of the National Theatre that it looks as if the management would have to double the capacity of the immense playhouse, which is now the largest vaudeville theatre in the world. It was a grand reopening in every sense of the word. It was not only grand in attendance and in surprising features, but the attractive playhouse looked more inviting than ever.

It was easy to see that the two top liners on the bill were big public favorites. Miss Eleanor Gordon, in the playlet "Kismet," got a big reception and did some clever work.

The big surprise of the night was when Dakota Dan, the claimant in the Russell will case, was introduced by the manager of the theatre. The manager explained that he had released Dakota Dan from his contract because his lawyer, William Scheerton, had advised Dakota Dan to state nothing about his case until it is decided in the courts. Dan thereupon bowed and retired.

The bill was a long and varied one. Wren Wentworth and Vesta, with their wonderful dog "Teddy," made a big hit, and Casey and Smith, the Boston Irish comedians, caught right on with the crowd. There were some good laughs in the work of Brown and Small and Mary Davis, the pretty soubrette, who sings well. One of the best singing and dancing acts on the bill was that of Josephine Saxton and her picks, who nearly danced their heads off. Marsh Craig did all the stunts that contortionists do and they added a few thrillers seldom seen in that sort of an act.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Violet Mascate's "Revlew Girls" continue at the Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Anna Held Having Trouble Getting a Decree of Divorce

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Anna Held, the actress, who "just can't make her eyes behave—those big brown eyes that Nature gave," is having trouble with her application for a divorce from her husband, Florenz Ziegfeld, the producer.

Supreme Court Justice Amend has denied the motions of her attorneys for the confirmation of the report of the referee, Edward G. Whitaker, favoring an interlocutory decree. Justice Amend ruled that witnesses had not signed the evidence as required by the code of court procedure.

Now Miss Held must appeal to the court to have the referee's report resubmitted. As there is no provision in Justice Amend's decision for a re-hearing, it is possible that the creator of the role of "Miss Innocence" must begin her suit all over again.

Plays to Come.

The Plymouth Theatre will re-open next Saturday evening with "The Man from Home." William Hodge retains his old role of the Indiana lawyer.

"The Greyhound" will be the first attraction of the season at the Boston Theatre, coming next Monday.

Rose Stahl, in "Maggie Pepper," a play by Charles Klein, will occupy the Park Theatre next week.

"The Quaker Girl," with Ina Claire and Percival Knight, will be the attraction at the Colonial next week.

"The Fortune Hunter" will be Mr. Craig's offering at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

Ocean Trips.

The steamer Dorothy Bradford makes daily trips to Provincetown, remaining long enough for passengers to visit points of interest.

The boats of the Gloucester line are carrying heavy passenger lists on each trip along the North Shore.

STOP SNEEZING AND SNIFFLING, RUNNING AT THE NOSE AND WEEPING

"Balm" is just the word for this soothing, healing, antiseptic Cream, its effects in cases of Hay Fever and Rose Colds are almost magical. You just grease the nostrils with a little of the Cream, inhale the pleasant, aromatic fumes; and in a few minutes your head begins to clear, the soreness is relieved, and the sneezing, sniffling and weeping stopped. People who have suffered for years with Hay Fever and Rose Cold can be free from all the distressing symptoms by simply using Ely's Cream Balm morning and night during the Hay Fever Season.

Hay Fever is due to an irritated inflamed condition of the mucous membrane (inside skin) of the nose and throat. Strong powders, snuffs and sprays simply aggravate the trouble, but Ely's Cream Balm soothes, heals and strengthens the raw, sore membranes, and in this way not only relieves the trouble but prevents its return.

All druggists sell and recommend it. Get a fifty-cent bottle today—use it according to directions—get your money back if you are not satisfied.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The Moulin Rouge" burlesquers moved into the Old Howard yesterday, assisted by a half dozen vaudeville features that made the show continuous.

Castle Square Theatre.

The new season at the Castle Square Theatre opened yesterday with "Green Stockings." The play will be reviewed in Wednesday's AMERICAN.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Boo Too Girls," with Bert Baker, supplied a burlesque entertainment at the Casino Theatre yesterday.

Scenic Temple.

New vaudeville and motion pictures made up the programme at the Scenic Temple yesterday.

St. James Theatre.

James J. Corbett returned to the Boston stage at the Grand Opera House yesterday and entertained his friends with a lively monologue. He was presented as an additional feature to "The Whirl of Mirth" burlesquers.

Norumbega Park.

A new vaudeville bill was presented at Norumbega Park yesterday. It was headed by the Five Banjo Fiends, who gave an enjoyable exhibition. There were six other features on the programme.

Gaiety Theatre.

Another smart burlesque attraction moved into the Gaiety Theatre yesterday. This time it was "The Taxi Girls," a company of spirited entertainers who made good in every particular. The big feature of the show was supplied by the Parrell Taylor Trio, which not only kept things moving during the olio but furnished fun during the two burlesques. The scenes of the burlesques were laid in Mexico, giving good opportunity for a spectacular display of costumes. A score of dashing young women added to the general attractiveness of the entertainment.

Shows That Remain.

"The Million" continues at the Majestic Theatre, where it is supplying theatre goers with many moments of lively mirth.

May Robson and "A Night Out" began a new week at the Park Theatre last evening. It is a laughing show.

The Derbar in Kinemacolor remains at Tremont Temple. These pictures are now on their third month.

Orpheum Theatre.

There were dancing girls in the new show at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday and they added much to the gaiety of the performance. "Winkler's Dancing Girls" was the simple announcement, but that gives no idea of the strenuous activity they thrust upon themselves in "The Dream of the Stone Age." New motion pictures were also shown.

Furs Chosen Now Will be Delivered Free To Your Address on Any Desired Date

If the prices quoted here are not from 1-4 to 1-3 lower now than they will be in November you need not accept the furs you have chosen—that is guarantee enough that we are going to save you money now on furs.

If we were to hold this purchase (which was bought previous to the big fur strike) until November our profits would be increased from 25% to 33 1-3%, but we are going after a tremendous fur business this season in the new store and profits are not as important as "big volume."

You'll be a "booster" for the Gilchrist Fur Store when you see these values.

Nearly Half of Our Big Second Floor Will be Given Over to the Display and Sale of these Furs

COAL GOING TO RECORD PRICE

The price of coal bids fair to reach a record price this Winter. The Summer price has already been advanced twenty-five cents a ton to the usual Winter price by all sizes with the exception of nut. None of the dealers predict that it will go lower. Most of them say they cannot tell what level it will reach.

A big shortage is the plea advanced. New England is reported as being 8,000,000 tons short, and the Boston dealers report shortages ranging from 50 per cent of normal up. The dealers say the mines have advanced the price 20 cents and that they have had to increase their price 25 cents a ton to meet this.

Frank T. Hitchcock, treasurer of the F. C. Warren Coal Company, said:

"It is true that there is a big shortage in the supply of coal. We have merely advanced it to the usual Winter price now. The future price will be governed entirely by the conditions we find. If the shortage continues or grows worse and we have to pay high premiums to middlemen in order to get enough to supply the demand, we shall have to increase the price still more."

D. J. Cutter of D. J. Cutter & Co., Dorchester, said:

"Coal is going to be very high this Winter. There is a big shortage. We, ourselves, are fifty per cent. short of what we should have on hand at this time of the year. I cannot predict how high coal will go, but it is certainly going to be higher than it is at present."

An official of the Bay State Coal Company said:

"The advance is the usual Winter raise. We are short of what we should have and the wholesalers have advanced the price 10 to thirty cents a ton. I think that we are doing well when we only advance it twenty-five cents a ton."

PRESIDENT TAFT, SNAPPED IN SOUTH STATION TODAY

President Taft arrived at Parrmatta, the Summer White House at Beverly, at 8:45 today. He came into Boston on the Federal express at 7:16 and motored up the North Shore boulevards to Beverly and Parrmatta.

Mr. Taft lost no time in changing into golf rig and speeding over to the Myopia Club links. As he is to be in Massachusetts only thirty-one hours this time, he proposed to get in all the golf he could. He starts for Columbus, Ohio, at 2 tomorrow afternoon to attend the Centennial Exposition.

L CAR AFIRE AT NORTH STATION

One of the cars on an inbound Elevated train caught fire early today just before reaching the North Station, and the passengers rushed to the station platform in a panic. Elevated employes extinguished the fire with chemicals.

Traffic was tied up for ten minutes at the busiest part of the rush hour, and much confusion resulted.

DEATHS

CHARLES MORON, famous as "Diavolo," a circus performer, and recently an aeronaut, is dead of typhoid fever at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y. He gained fame as a bicycle rider.

REV. JULES JOLLON, who, forty-four years ago, founded the Roman Catholic Church of St. Louis, in the Williamsburg district of Brooklyn, died in the rectory of that church.

HAROLD GAY, an electrical engineer, who electrified the Hoosac Tunnel in Massachusetts and the Hudson River Tunnel, died at his home in Farmington, Ct., of heart disease.

MRS. LUCY W. PIRINGTON of West Bath, Me., who celebrated her 101st birthday on August 16, is dead at the home.

MRS. GRACE A. BURT HOMAN, instructor in elocution and dramatics at Erasmus Hall High School, Brooklyn, for fourteen years, died at her home in Flatbush.

GEORGE HOBBS, eighty-eight years old, for many years editor and proprietor of the Woburn Journal, is dead at his home in that town.

WILLIAM DANIEL LAMB, the first moderator of the town of Lawrence and the oldest physician in the city, is dead in Lawrence, in his eighty-ninth year.

GEORGE CLINTON PAINE of Elmira, N. Y., who was 101 years old July 9, is dead at the home of his son at Odessa, N. Y. Mr. Paine was at work up to the day he was taken ill.

Enjoin Sheldon on Charge He Retained Fund of $100,000

On the allegation that Royal B. Sheldon, while treasurer of the Chelmsford Foundry Company had retained and used for his own benefit $100,000, Judge Morton in the equity session of the Superior Court today granted a temporary injunction restraining Sheldon from transferring to his wife, Jennie T. Sheldon, his interest in the Gaiety Theatre on Washington street. This injunction holds until the hearing on a bill of equity brought by the Chelmsford Foundry Company.

$75,000 FIRE AT PORTLAND, ME.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 27.—A fire, thought to have been of incendiary origin, destroyed the largest factory building in this city, occupied by the Portland Hardware Company, early today, causing such a scare that a general alarm was sent in calling out all of the fire-fighting force of the city.

The damage was estimated at $75,000.

SAYS HE KNOWS "FRESNO DAN"

William P. Scharton, attorney for Dakota Dan Russell, intimated today that he is now in possession of evidence establishing positively the real identity of Fresno Dan, the claimant accepted by the Russell estate.

The statement was made in comment upon District Attorney Higgins' action in summoning the chief attorneys in the case to a conference in his office in Cambridge at their earliest convenience.

Mr. Higgins is at The Weirs in New Hampshire. Robert W. Nason, representing the Russell estate, is in Maine. Mr. Scharton is in Boston.

District Attorney's action. It is believed, indicates that he has evidence of importance on the case and may propose a conference in his office in Cambridge at their earliest convenience.

PLAN CONFERENCE TO BOOM BAY STATE PORTS AND RIVERS

Harbor and Land Commissioner William S. McNary conferred today with Connecticut authorities in Hartford regarding opening up the Connecticut River for navigation as far as Holyoke. This will be followed by a conference between representatives of the Boston Port Directors, the Harbor and Land Commission and the Connecticut and Merrimac River commissions on plans for the development of Massachusetts rivers and harbors.

The first step toward the conference was the meeting today in Hartford of Governor Baldwin and Commissioner William S. McNary for the opening up of the Connecticut River for navigation as far as Holyoke.

The Directors of the Port of Boston have engaged Edwin J. Clapp, whose recent book on the port of Hamburg has attracted attention, to investigate and report on the traffic facilities of the port of Boston. Mr. Clapp is at present connected with the department of trade and transportation in the School of Commerce of New York University, and has obtained a year's leave of absence to do this work.

REVERE CHIEF OF POLICE BACK BY AUTO WITH CAPTIVE

The mystery surrounding the strange disappearance from Revere Saturday of Chief of Police Fred S. Sackett was cleared today when he drove into Marlboro in the Revere Police Department automobile with William Paine, whom he went to Philadelphia to get and bring back to answer to a charge of conducting a liquor nuisance. The chief left for Revere after resting at the Gleason House. To a reporter he said: "I left Revere Saturday to get Paine, who forfeited his bail. I found him in Philadelphia and started back in the machine. I stopped at Springfield and set out for Revere, but the fog forced me to stop at Marlboro. I don't see what business it is of anyone if I go away on official business. I don't know as I am obliged to let everyone know what my business is."

DYING ON TRACKS.

LOWELL, Aug. 27.—An unidentified man, thought to be Roger Morrison of Penfield, N. H., was found dying on the Boston & Maine tracks near the Thorndike street freight office.

Society Girl Dancers in Brilliant Fete for Titanic Memorial at the John Hays Hammond Estate in Gloucester.

On left, standing, is Virginia Tanner leading the pantomime dance, "The Flowers of the Sea," the children of notable families, including the daughters of the late President Cleveland, taking part. Mrs. Cleveland was among the spectators. On the right is shown a group of society girls who took part in the dance, "The Waters of the Sea and the Brook." It was the most elaborate open air fete undertaken on the North Shore in years, netting $10,000 toward the fund to honor the heroes of the great sea tragedy. Photographs by R. W. Sears of the AMERICAN.

ELECTRIC FAN RUINS PLUMES ON HER HAT

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—Mirrors in motors were recently condemned in Philadelphia because passengers spent too much time primping before them. Now electric fans may go. The Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company has been asked to present a new hat to one of its patrons whose immense willow plume became entangled in an electric fan in one of the terminal elevators and was ruined.

BEGIN CAMPAIGN TODAY TO CONSERVE HEALTH IN SCHOOLS

More rigorous measures than ever in the past will be adopted this year to protect the health of the public school children, according to Dr. Francis X. Maloney of the Board of Health.

With the opening of the term, the second week in September, the Health Department will co-operate with the School Hygiene Department to list all homes in the different districts containing patients with contagious diseases.

Beginning today, the Health Department will send out letters to all of the school physicians with the list of cases reported up to date.

This year examinations of the physical well-being of the child before entering school will be more thorough than ever.

Sum of Ten Thousand Dollars Netted to Honor Memory of Heroes of the Sea.

North Shore society discussed today with renewed delight and enthusiasm the unique and artistic program offered for its pleasure at the Titanic memorial fete arranged by Mrs. John Hays Hammond at the Hammond estate, Lookout Hill, Freshwater Cove, in Gloucester.

It is estimated that $10,000 was netted for the Titanic memorial. The attendance was 1,500.

A program of beautiful songs and dances led up to the pantomime of "The Flowers of the Sea," which pictured the custom of old Gloucester people of, once a year, scattering flowers on the waves in memory of lost seamen.

Not only was the pantomime elaborate, but those presenting it included the daughters of notable families.

Miss Marion Cleveland was the "Spirit of the Sea." Her sister, Miss Esther, was one of the waters of the sea. The Cleveland girls, daughters of the late President Cleveland, came down especially for this fete with their mother from their Summer home at Tamworth, N. H.

Mrs. Cleveland a Guest.

Mrs. Cleveland was one of the guests occupying a balcony inclosure. In the balcony also were Mrs. William Howard Taft, wife of President Taft; "Charley" Taft, Mrs. Robley D. Evans, widow of the late "Fighting Bob" Evans; Charles P. Taft, brother of the President; Mrs. John Hay and a few others. Seated in the temporary auditorium were 1,500 representatives of North Shore Summer society.

The triumph of the program was the music, "The Spirit of the Sea," in which Miss Marion Cleveland, attired in white, stood on a high rock, as the sea spirit, with great white wings at her back, with a silver ship beside her, palms of peace and victory in her hand and flower-bearing children grouped at her feet.

Mrs. Hammond and Eric Pape, who planned and produced the fete, received innumerable compliments.

A Greek dance by Miss Edith Wynne Matthison, an Assyrian dance by Miss Virginia Tanner, scripture reading by Charles Sann Kennedy, singing by Mrs. S. Henry Hooper, Mrs. Grace Bonner Williams, George E. Hill and Sullivan A. Sargent; scenes from "As You Like It" by Miss Matthison, William K. Harcourt, and Miss Olga Lingard; and recitation by Mrs. Alice Fischer Harcourt made up the opening part.

Girls in Pantomime.

Among the girls of the younger set taking part in the pantomime were: Miss Katherine Ayer, Miss Olga Lingard, Miss Murray Kay, Miss Marguerite McIlroton, Miss Feroline Perkins, Miss Dorothy Wilmot, Miss Dorothy Hooper, Miss Jean Hinsdale, Miss Katherine Soother, Miss Helen Longzi, Miss Anne Means, Miss Mary Hoyle, Miss Hammond, Peggy Porter, Dorothy Morrill, Isabel Porter, Elsie Morrill, Helen Colbert, Edythe Redman, Frances Weld, Natalie Hammond.

AGREEMENT STOPS FALL RIVER STRIKE

FALL RIVER, Aug. 27.—An agreement was reached today in the strike of the twenty-five loomfixers at the Wampanoag Mills, who quit work yesterday, whereby they will return to work tomorrow morning. The differences as to working conditions will be settled at a conference of the executive committee of the Loomfixers' Union and the Manufacturers' Association. The fifty weavers who went out in sympathy with the loomfixers also will return to work.

GERMAN, 61, WEDS ITALIAN GIRL OF 16

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—After a three years' courtship, carried on with the aid of an interpreter, Levi Quadenfeld, sixty-one, a wealthy German contractor and builder, and sixteen-year-old Maria di Giacome, Italian, were married, despite the attempt of neighbors, led by a daughter of Quadenfeld, to prevent the wedding.

In their opposition to the match, neighbors of Quadenfeld went so far as to destroy some of his household furniture.

PART OF BRAIN GONE, MAN WILL RECOVER

YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Surgeons of St. Joseph's Hospital, Yonkers, proudly announce that John Martin, whose skull was badly fractured, is recovering and will live with part of his brain missing. Martin is twenty-eight years old. He was found unconscious on the New York Central tracks four weeks ago. Dr. Mendeljohn and Dr. Lopez, who operated upon him, found that several bits of brain tissue had been torn away and lost. His mind is somewhat affected, but the doctors believe the defect only temporarily.

FOUR MONTHS AGING ADDS INCREASED HEALTHFULNESS

To Harvard (GREEN LABEL) EXPORT BEER

Commonwealth of Massachusetts

SUFFOLK, ss. BOSTON, June 1, 1912

James R. Nicholson, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, first being duly sworn, hereby makes oath and says:

That he is the President of the Harvard Brewing Company, a corporation engaged in the brewing of malt liquors and having its usual places of business in Lowell in the County of Middlesex and said Commonwealth;

That all Harvard Export Beer (green label) has been brewed four months before it is offered for sale to the public;

That said Harvard Export Beer which is now offered to the public was brewed during the month of January of the current year; and

That all Harvard Export Beer which shall be offered to the public will, in the future, as now, have been brewed at least four months prior to the date of offering for sale.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the said James R. Nicholson has hereunto set his hand and seal the first day of June, A. D., 1912.

James R. Nicholson

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

SUFFOLK, ss. Boston, June 1, 1912

Then personally appeared the above named James R. Nicholson, to me known to be President of the Harvard Brewing Company, and made oath that the foregoing affidavit by him subscribed is true.

Before me,

G. Edward Davis
Notary Public.

WHAT AGING MEANS TO US

To have beer four months old we require extra extensive storage cellars in which to give it that age.
It means a heavy investment in buildings, vats, materials and aging beer, more of an investment than most brewers are willing to make.
It means an extra force of skilled workmen and extra care extending over this long period.

WHAT AGING MEANS TO YOU

A beer with an extreme mellowness of flavor.

A beer with a delightful smoothness of taste.

A beer that has been thoroughly fermented and ripened, the yeast being thoroughly eliminated.

A brilliancy of appearance that only age can bring.

Ask your dealer if he can guarantee that the beer he is serving you has been aged four months

If he can't—Order Harvard EXPORT (GREEN LABEL) BEER

and you'll get the best beer ever brewed

PARENTS UNMOVED AS COURT TAKES AWAY 4 STARVING CHILDREN

"For all men are created equal with certain inalienable rights, such as life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

Judge Walter I. Lane looked for a moment at the four Walkins children who were brought before him in the Bridgewater court and without hesitancy committed them to the State Charitable Board.

"The parents of these children, are they in court, and will they appear to give reasons why these children should not be taken from them?"

After a moment there was silence in the courtroom, the few onlookers occupying the benches craned their necks and listened for the sobs of a broken-hearted mother from whom her eight-months-old infant was about to be taken, as well as her other three, the eldest boy, Roger, being twelve years. All was silence except for the scratching of pencils in notebooks by several reporters.

Mystery in Occupation.

"Eight months old baby weighs nine pounds, is white as paper, and has no teeth. Six-year-old girl also very pale, weighs twenty pounds and is unable to walk on account of a bad case of rickets brought about by malnutrition and neglect. Older children thin and starved appearing." These were the notes the reporters were writing.

No parents appeared and the children were taken to the State House in this city and turned over to the State Board of Charity, which organization will find homes for them aided by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Three years ago the Walkins family lived in Braintree. The father is an electrician and was thought by his neighbors to be something of an inventor, and writer as well, though no one had seen his articles in scientific magazines which he said he had written.

No one had seen him at work at his desk, no one had seen the inside of his house, and no one knew just how many children he had, though it was certain that there were several from the cries that could be occasionally heard through the closed blinds and locked doors. No one was admitted to the Walkins home and the grocer boy was not allowed to put his head into the kitchen. There was mystery in the house and, as the neighbors expressed it, "something queer."

Then a baby died and the coroner was called upon to give the death certificate. It read something like this:

"Cause of death, marasmus, contributory cause to ignorance and neglect by mother." Marasmus is the polite name for starvation. When the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children heard of this death certificate, they tried to investigate the Walkins family, but they could never get inside of the house and the children were not seen in the streets. The neighbors knew nothing, but suspected much.

Ignorance and Neglect.

In 1911 another baby died, and the death certificate read about as the first one. "Ignorance and neglect on the part of the mother."

The Children's Society now tried to obtain a warrant that would allow them to enter the house and discover the actual conditions, but the court did not see proper to grant the warrant. Besides, the parents of the dead baby showed great grief for their child and turned over their house a large flag at half mast.

After several changes of residence from Braintree to Roxbury and from Roxbury to Brockton, Louis H. Walkins took his family to live in Bridgewater where they were found last week by Mr. Jones of the S. P. C. C. This agent for the Children's society was informed that the family should be broken up on account of neglect and cruelty.

An attempt was made to meet and talk to Walkins, and he was sent for by an agent in Bridgewater to do some electrical work. Walkins is shrewd and soon discovered that he had been sent for to be questioned about his family. He went back to his home and wrote a very bitter letter to the agent who was trying to interfere with his domestic affairs.

"Take care," he wrote, "for I shall bring this matter into the courts and you shall have all the investigation you wish. You cannot by lies and deceit obtain any information from me." This was the tenor of the letter and it was written on paper with the elaborate heading:

"Society for the Advancement of the Church of Christ Universal, founded on the life and teachings of Jesus Christ and the science of national eugenics. The name of the hotel followed, "The Clarence Montello," which happens to be a very much run down three-decker flat at No. 846 Summer street, Bridgewater.

Boy Sent from School.

Roger Walkins, the twelve-year-old boy, was sent to school in Bridgewater, but was dismissed to get better clothing to wear and to be made presentable and clean.

One day not long ago a little neighbor girl who was playing in her yard, which is immediately under one of the upper windows of the Walkins house, saw a small rope being let down toward where she was playing. On the end of this rope was a piece of dirty yellow paper. The girl saw that it was a note and immediately took it to read.

"Will you get a blouse and give it to Marion to bring up to me before my papa comes home to send me to the reform school and I am kinder hungry—as I only had 2 biscuits (home made) today. And if you have anything to eat to spare I would like it, that is if you could spare it and please send it up to me on this rope. Keep this and let your mother have this when she comes.

"P. S.—Please excuse me for making the above mistakes as Mamma came up and I was in a hurry to hide it—therefore made the mistakes.

"ROGER WALKINS."

The little neighbor girl found food for the hungry boy and sent it up by the rope.

Other notes were written; one was addressed to "Aunt Alice," and it again asked for food and clothing.

"Please send it when my father is not at home, for he is going to send me to a reform school (What is a reform school), I have not had any supper tonight, and if it is not too much trouble send me a little lunch, such as a piece of bread."

One day Roger's mother discovered the rope and some food that had been sent up to him, and after that came the sound of hammering; the window was nailed down tight.

When the agent for the Children's Society heard this story and saw the notes he was able to obtain the warrant he had been trying to secure, and went with an officer to get the children.

Father Disappears.

After much parleying with Mrs. Walkins and threats to break open the door Jones, the agent, and the policeman were admitted. Conditions were found to be as bad as possible; the air was stifling and the rooms were dark. Walkins was not found, but neighbors said that he had escaped out through the back yard and later the tracks were found where the promoter of the Christian life and National Eugenics had beat a hasty retreat.

The starving children are now in the hands of friends and yesterday when food was given them by the agents of the State Board, the oldest boy, Roger, was heard to ask when told to eat more: "Can we have all that we want?"

A warrant will be issued for the father, who will by the State law be compelled to contribute to the support of the children or be sent to prison.

POLITICAL NEWS

No candidate is stepping livelier than Joe Cahill, who wants the Senate nomination from the Democrats of the First Suffolk district. Cahill is one who is not frightened at the prospect of fighting Representative Ed Bagley, who will be given the Republican nomination without a contest.

There are five candidates for the Democratic nomination for the Senate from the Eighth Suffolk district, in addition to three aspirants for the Republican nomination. The district is Democratic by over 1,000.

John A. Anderson is one budding politician not frightened by the mystic thirteen. He filed his nomination papers on the thirteenth of the month and was the thirteenth candidate to deposit papers with the secretary of State. He seeks a Democratic nomination for the House from Ward 20.

The Republicans are confident of gaining a Senatorial seat in the Ninth Suffolk district, where Representative James A. Hart is being given an uncontested nomination. Representative McMorrow and Senator Horgan, both from Ward 23, are contesting for the Democratic nomination with indications that the fight before the caucus will be a lively one.

Eddie Collins, the only Democratic member of the Governor's council, says he has never yet won a political honor without a contest, consequently he is not surprised to find a candidate contesting with him for the Democratic nomination from the Third district. Ex-Representative Theodore Glynn of Ward 17 is Collins' opponent.

WARD 17 TAMMANY CLUB FOR PELLETIER

The Ward Seventeen Tammany Club has endorsed District Attorney Pelletier for the Democratic nomination for Governor. David I. Walsh has been endorsed for Lieutenant-Governor, over ex-Councilor Edward P. Barry. Other endorsements were: for Congressman, James M. Curley; for Sheriff, John Quinn, Jr.; for the Governor's Council, Edward D. Collins; for State Senator, Timothy F. Callahan, and for Representatives, Michael J. McEttrick and Representative William P. O'Brien.

MISS INGERSOLL TO BE T. R. DELEGATE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Among the delegates to the Progressive State convention of Syracuse on September 5 will be Miss Maud R. Ingersoll, daughter of the late Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll. Miss Ingersoll lives at No. 117 East Twenty-first street. Republicans of not very long memory recall that it was her father who made the famous "plumed knight" speech nominating James G. Blaine in 1876 at Cincinnati.

NO EPIDEMIC AT LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—Through irresponsible newspaper correspondents, absolutely false reports have been sent out from this city of the existence of an infantile paralysis "epidemic."

As a matter of fact, this great national resort has enjoyed a Summer of exceptional beauty, and the "scare" has had no justification whatever in the health conditions of the city.

Furthermore, Los Angeles citizens were not even aware that such reports were in existence and were surprised and startled to find the city charged with an epidemic of which they had no knowledge.

In this particular the situation is unique. While papers elsewhere contained reports of the spread of the disease, Los Angeles moved calmly on its way, enjoying a succession of cool, cloudless days, the beaches crowded with merrymakers, its hotels full, and in all particulars blessed with a happy and prosperous Summer season.

There have been isolated and fugitive cases of infantile paralysis, but not more than might be expected in any community of this size. These cases were a trifling percentage of the whole population.

Merely as a matter of precaution, the health authorities prohibited children from attending amusement places, and a few Sunday schools were closed in congested districts.

These official safeguards were intended to arrest immediately any spread of the disease, and by no means indicated an agitated state of mind over the few cases under the care of the Health Department.

But they were grossly misinterpreted, and foolish reports have grown in volume, until Los Angeles is said to have an epidemic that does not exist, and never did exist.

The population of Los Angeles, by the latest authentic computation, is 450,000. The total of deaths from infantile paralysis since June 8, was but one death for 9,333 population. Even this small number of cases shows a decline. Furthermore, certain doctors and critics of the Health Department maintain that through over-seriousness, mistakes have been made in diagnosing; that many cases called infantile paralysis have been nothing more than colic and stomach disorders.

As a matter of fact, the average number of cases of infantile paralysis in Los Angeles is no larger than in any other city, and much less than in most of them.

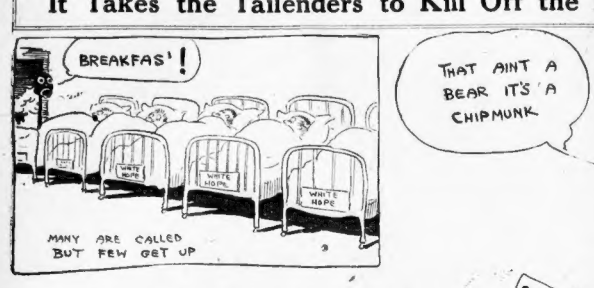
PILGRIMS HOPE TO REPEAT THEIR RECENT SUCCESSES

It Takes the Tailenders to Kill Off the Pennant Chasers — By Hal Coffman.



RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

MOST every Sunday the champion ball players take a day off. Every Monday the champion baseball players have an off day. This is an axiom of baseball (also of business). The day after the eight before is a blue day. Witness: The White Sox beat the Red Sox, 4 to 2; the Browns won the second game from Washington, 4 to 3, Walter Johnson to the contrary notwithstanding, although they captured the first, 6 to 3; Cincinnati beat the Giants, 5 to 0, and piled up thirteen hits off Marquard; Brooklyn, with Rucker on the mound, beat the Cubs, 12 to 3, and the Pilgrims picked up the second game from Pittsburgh, 8 to 4, Donnelly pitching a winner at last and "Hank" Gowdy appearing behind the bat. Also, the Pirates trimmed the Pilgrims by the meager margin of one run in the 5-to-4 first game.

* * *

IF you MUST bet, take the "small end" against the leaders on Monday. The Red Sox, for instance, have lost more Monday games than those they have dropped on any other particular day of the week. And so it is with most of the others.

* * *

HERE'S another bit of "dope." On Saturdays look for the teams away from home to lose to the home teams and the clubs that are just "in" the pennant chase to lose to the clubs lower down. The answer is simple. Saturday is bargain day. The box office bosses the manager. He saves his pitching star for Saturday so as to help the cashier. The home team almost always uses its greatest flinger on the half-holiday. The team away down in the race produces its best on Saturday.

* * *

LAST year, when the Red Sox were struggling around third place, they were accustomed to lose more games on Saturday than on any other day, just because the other fellow saved up his pitching star for that occasion and the Sox had no particular star. This year, of course, they have a star, and they use him on Saturdays—Joe Wood, of course—and, although the other fellow also employs HIS star, Wood usually triumphs. But Monday is the weakest day of the week.

* * *

DAY-OFF dissipation is not the answer. Day-off relaxation is. Baseball is the most exacting sport on earth, because you have to keep at it day in and day out. If you're winning a major league pennant the tension is tremendous unless you become so phlegmatic that you forget the score board and just play ball. When you take a day off you are not limbered up when the umpire calls "play ball" on the following day.

* * *

THE White Sox are playing with abandon just now, because they're out of the pennant race. All innings look alike to them. They just go out on the field and lay their hardest, taking all kinds of chances, because they have nothing at stake. The White Sox, who led the race until the Red Sox wrested the lead away from them, don't care who wins the pennant. If they have any interest aside from just playing baseball it is in the chances of the Cubs in the National League race. If the Cubs do not win the National League pennant, the White Sox will pick up a few hundred dollars playing in Chicago city series. Not from spite, but because of the fun and the money in an inter-Chicago fight do the White Sox root for the Giants.

* * *

YESTERDAY was ideal for Ed Walsh. It was cloudy and dark. The "spitball" boys are the only lads who are difficult for the Red Sox, and when you combine a moist ball, a bunch of speed and a dark day—as were combined against the Sox yesterday—you have them in trouble. All of them, Speaker included, were sniffing at Walsh's balls when they passed by in the dark. Walsh had Speaker in a hole three times in four times at bat, and he had the others hitting over, under and after them most of the time.

* * *

THE Red Sox, as a team, are not "big-stickers" this year; only three of them, Speaker, Gardner and Stahl, are in the .300 class. But they rarely strike out. Walsh "fanned" seven yesterday.

* * *

WHY is it that the man who makes a spectacular field play is usually first at bat when his team next comes off the field? In the fourth inning Jack Collins drove a long high one to deep left center. It was fished for two or three bases. Lewis clambered up "Duffy's Cliff," seated himself half-way up, and gathered it in, although it fell away to his left. According to custom, he was the first man to bat in the Red Sox half of the inning. You've probably noticed this oddity often before. If not, watch.

* * *

ALSO, why is it that the greatest cloister carries three bats to the plate, the lesser lights two and the ordinary player only one? Cobb and Speaker use three clubs over their shoulder while they are "on deck," as the kids say. Bill Carrigan and similar veterans carry two; the others are satisfied to pick out a club and leave the rest in the line of bats, so precisely arranged by the mascot. Recently, after feeling his title of Batting King challenged by Speaker, I carried four clubs to the plate. Is the custom emblematic of standing in the percentage column?

COBB started the practice. He declared that he had a sensitive feeling in respect to his bats, and that the one whose weight and shape most nearly responded to that feeling as he stepped to the plate was the one he selected. Speaker followed suit, and discovered that there was something in the idea. At least it seemed so. This is a tip for students of psychology—and of advertising.

* * *

STEVE YERKES lost his good sense for a moment yesterday, and it cost Boston a run. In the sixth inning, Callahan drove a single past Gardner. Jack Collins lifted a high one to far right center. Speaker chased it and almost got under it, but as it fell booted it almost to the bleachers. Callahan scored and Collins made three bases. While the Newton citizen perched on third base, utterly innocent of harmful intentions in respect to the sacred home plate, Yerkes received Speaker's throw, and, after looking the ground over as if to see that Collins and Speaker had not damaged it, he suddenly sizzled it at Carrigan. Bill was anchored at the plate, but had not discovered any reason for a stranding there just at that particular instant, so the ball sailed past him, and Collins, suddenly apprised of such a marvelously unexpected gift in a close game of baseball, dashed home. Yerkes was mad, and hurled his glove to the ground, but that didn't keep the score board man from tacking up two runs instead of one at the end of the inning.

* * *

RAY COLLINS occupied the spot light in the fifth. He began by making a remarkable stop and throw to retire Weaver. Then Kuhn drove one to Gardner, who failed to take it on a short bound, and he was safe. As Collins wound up, Kuhn started for second. Carrigan signalled the attempted steal to Collins, but Ray, not noticing or paying no attention to his catcher for the moment, delivered a slow curve outside the plate to Walsh, instead of a fast straight pitch-out, and Carrigan, expecting the latter, dropped the ball, giving Kuhn the base. He "called" Collins, and Ray regarded the mistake on the part of Bill. Rath delivered a slow bounder that went high over Collins' head and looked like a sure single. Collins, who is 6 feet 1 inch tall and has a tremendous reach, jumped, took the ball in his gloved hand, and made a fizzling throw to first, just catching the White Sox runner and ending the inning.

* * *

CARRIGAN could not fairly be discredited with a passed ball for the ninth take of the pitcher in the inning, any more than he could be charged with missing Yerkes' unexpected and uncalled-for throw in the next session. Had he caught Ray Collins' pitch to Walsh, Kuhn would have been safe, and had he caught Yerkes' throw, Jack Collins would have remained at third, which he was willing to stick and whence he would have scored, anyway, on Bodie's single an inning later.

* * *

THIS bit of Bodie's also led into a Red Sox misplay. Zeider was the next man up. He dropped a fly in short left field. Lewis, Speaker and Wagner ran for it. "Hands" shouted that he would take it, but it was a bit too far out for him, under the circumstances, and he dropped it. Bodie then bolted for second. Speaker picked up the ball, hurled it to Yerkes, and Bodie was called out at second, although it looked from the stands as if he were safe on the close decision.

* * *

ANOTHER question of decision was raised in the fifth. Carrigan led off with a single and was sacrificed to second by Collins. Nobody covered the bag, and Bill ran half-way to third as Jack Collins held the ball. Mattick sneaked in from centre field, and when Carrigan was warned the ball and Bill reached second at the same time. Mattick pushed Carrigan off the base, but O'Loughlin called him safe. The entire White Sox crowd rushed into the diamond to argue it out, but "Silk" refused even to listen to them, turned his back and walked away. Callahan was belligerent, but it was no use.

* * *

UMPIRE WESTERVELT objected to Nunamaker's remarks from the bench in the early innings, and when Nunamaker started for the coaching lines in the fourth Westervelt showed him away, and would not rest until the Boston catcher had quit the field altogether.

GRIFFITH FOUGHT BOSTON IN 1904

The present season must be much of a nightmare to Garry Griffith, manager of the Washington team, the one leading big sensation, for the race this year recalls vividly to Griff's mind the contest for the pennant in 1904. Griffith was at that time leader of the New York Yanks and he lost the flag to Boston when Jack Chesbro made a wild pitch in the game that involved the pennant.

Washington is somewhat farther removed from Boston at present than Griff's New York team was in 1904. That season Boston and New York was running up and trick, one day one club and the next day the other heading the procession. It is not likely that Washington will creep much closer to Boston this year, providing both teams play to form, but if the Red Sox do take a slump, a repetition of the race of 1904 can be expected.

In 1904 Griffith took a team that was not regarded as having a chance and drilled them into a pennant contender. He has done the same with Washington this season. No one picked the Nationals to run one, two, three before the season opened.

Griffith had one dependable pitcher in 1904, Jack Chesbro. Again, this year he has one dependable hurler on his Washington club, Walter Johnson. In 1904, working under Griffith, Chesbro established his high run of victories, fourteen in a row, and this season working under Griffith, Walter Johnson has already broken an American League record for straight "wins," having a total of sixteen in a row to date.

When it come down to the final series in 1904 New York and Boston had to play five games in three days. Chesbro won the first game for New York, allowing four hits. He tried to come back the next day in the first game of a double-header. Boston knocked him from the box. New York lost both games on that day and needed but little remaining games to win the championship. The pennant was to be decided in a double-header. Again Chesbro went to the mound in the first game. He pitched great ball, but in the final moment with victory in sight for him, he let go a wild pitch. A Boston player scored from third. New York lost the game and the pennant.

Harpoon Wins Second Quincy Y. C. Cup Race

The Harpoon was again the winner in the second race of the Quincy Yacht Club which was sailed today at Quincy over a twelve-mile course. The race was close from start to finish, the cup defender holding third position three miles from the finish mark.

The Cima, of Manchester Y. C., was forced to withdraw after half the race had been sailed, having fouled a buoy off Duncan Island.

The third race will be sailed tomorrow, and the Harpoon is again picked to win.

Padded Mitts Fail to Lure Fitzsimmons, Jr.

WESTFIELD, N. J., Aug. 27.—There is not the slightest longing for prize ring honors in the heart of Bob Fitzsimmons, Jr., the husky seventeen-year-old son of the former world's champion. At the Fitzsimmons home at Dunellon the other day there was great excitement among the youthful sports of the neighborhood when young Bob knocked out Kid Harris, known as the "trolley champion," in less than one round. The bout took place in the Fitzsimmons barn, near the trolley terminal.

It was rumored about the village that Bob, Jr., had decided to enter the prize hope brigade, but all these hopes were dashed when young Fitzsimmons today declared that the fight game is too brutal for him, that he does not care for it, and that he probably will become an electrical engineer, taking a course at Rutgers as preparation for that career. He is a regular attendant at Sunday school at Dunellon.

His father has repeatedly urged the boy, who weighs 170 pounds, to try his skill and mettle with some of the ambitious middleweights, but young Bob has no desire to emulate his famous daddy.

Red Sox Out to Win Second Game

Young Bedient to Oppose Cicotte

Having disposed of Ed Walsh and his fast "spit ball" and having subdued their customary once-a-week off-day baseball at one session, the Red Sox, still eight games ahead of the Senators, may serenely resume their pennant quest this afternoon by tackling the White Sox from Chicago again.

The Red Sox will be opposed by their former teammate, Eddie "Knuckles" Cicotte, who has shown improved form since joining the White Hosed fraternity. Jimmy Callahan is figuring on making the same fine showing against the Red Sox as he did against the Senators and Athletics. As Cicotte took both of those teams into camp, Callahan believes that his knuckle ball artist will repeat against the locals.

Manager Stahl plans on using either Hugh Bedient or Charley Hall on the firing line, with the latter looming up strong as the probable choice.

Yesterday was a dark, gloomy day and the Red Sox could not find Walter Ed. Walsh was placing the ball. If they were not striking out or hitting into somebody's hands, they were usually in the hole, so they had to hit the best way they could. Besides, the Bostonians had their usual one slow day and did not furnish the classy defence that usually marks their play.

After the Washington Senators had won the first game with the Browns, and had taken a lead of two runs on the near-tailenders, which was all the crowd knew when they went home, it looked as if Washington had gained 1½ games on the Red Sox. But after the Fenway Park struggle was over the Browns scored four runs at Washington and trimmed the Senators, 4 to 3, so that all the runners-up gained in the American League race was a paltry one-half game.

Spring Walsh on Stahl.

When Jimmy Callahan announced that Walsh was his choice for the opening day, Jake Stahl made a quick shift and called Ray Collins to work out of his turn. Collins was in sore form Friday and held the hard-hitting Cleveland "Naps" to two hits. Joe Wood worked Saturday, also vanquishing the "Naps," so it was out of the question to use him yesterday. Collins, having had a bit more rest, was chosen, and, suffering from only near-champion support in the field and an insufficient offence, due largely to the dark day, was beaten. Callahan took advantage of the fact that Collins had worked Friday and Wood Saturday to fling Walsh in on the first day of the series and get away with a ball game.

In the eighth Stahl withdrew Collins to use Bedient as a pinch hitter, and Olaf singled, scoring later on a most remarkable play by Tris Speaker. "Spoke" drove one past Weaver to Mattick in centre field and "fans" have rarely seen a big league batter make more than one base on such a rap. But Speaker does the unusual things. As Mattick leisurely picked up the ball, Speaker dashed for second and got away with the play, much to the astonishment of everybody.

Pape Pitches an Inning.

This gave Larry Pape a chance to work for an inning and the lad did well, three men facing him and two going out on a double play after a base on balls. Pape rarely appears nowadays, Stahl relying chiefly on Wood, Collins and Bedient, with Hall and O'Brien coupled in games now and then. Ordinarily, O'Brien would pitch today, but "Buck" has been withdrawn four times in succession and Jake may use Hall instead.

The Red Sox had "the jump" on the White Sox by scoring in the first, yesterday, but never could concentrate their offence after that, until they squeezed through that run in the eighth. After two were out in the third, three hits in a row, one of them, Mattick's triple, scored two runs. Callahan's single, Jack Collins' triple, and Yerkes' muffed-fly throw to the plate while Collins rested on third after his slam, produced the other two. In the seventh, after Kuhn and Walsh had struck out, three errors in a row nearly delivered another run, but with the bases full Rath tried to score on Wagner's bad throw of Callahan's ground hit to Engle and was caught at the plate.

In the National League the relative positions of the leaders is unchanged today, the Cincinnati Reds having beaten the Giants, 5 to 0, although Marquard pitched, and the Brooklyn Dodgers having defeated the Chicago Cubs, 12 to 3. The Boston Pilgrims split even with the Pittsburg Pirates.

Matty McIntyre is Let go by White Sox

Matty McIntyre, for two years a member of the Chicago White Sox and an American League for several years before that, has been sold to the Milwaukee team of the American Association.

The sale is probably part of the deal which brought Catcher Ray Schalk to the Sox. Manager Callahan has been trying to find a berth for McIntyre for several weeks. He made an effort to dispose of him to Baltimore, but Presidents Comiskey and Dunn could not agree on terms. The Chicago players hated to see Matty go, for he is one of the most popular men in the squad.

Ten Eyck to Coach Greer for Big Race

James A. Ten Eyck, coach of Syracuse University crews and one of the best-known professional oarsmen in America, will train Frank B. Greer for his match with William Haines on Labor Day. He will have full charge of Greer's work, both on land and water. Greer has received his new racing shell and is giving it a good trying out. He is rowing from the B. A. A. boathouse.

Greer has implicit faith in Ten Eyck's ability to bring him to the line even in this short time in prime fettle.

PLANS FOR REGATTA.

To make final arrangements for the Labor Day regatta the executive committee of the New England Amateur Rowing Association will hold a special meeting next Friday night.

Good Matches Played in Press Tournament

Matches in the first round of the four divisions that are playing in the press tournament of the Press Club on the Woodland C. C. links were played today. Competition was keenest in the afternoon rounds when all of the players went over the course.

In the Charles H. Taylor Cup division F. T. O'Connor of the Press Club defeated H. L. Lockwood of the Journal by 2 up. In the Monitor Cup division C. A. Sycamore of Hatherley defeated E. M. Taft of Worcester in a five round by 1 up.

PILGRIMS OUT TO REPEAT WIN

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 27.—The Boston Pilgrims are out to spring another surprise on the Pirates in today's game and are figuring adding another victory to their slim list. Manager Kling plans on using Lefty Tyler, who is always effective against the Pirates, in the belief that the portsider will be able to take their number.

The Pilgrims are sure showing some speed these days. The way they went at the Pirates yesterday was a real shock to Clarke and his men. If they had started their present gait earlier in the season, it is a cinch that they would not now be idling in at the bottom of the big league standing.

After losing the first game yesterday by the close margin of one run, the Pilgrims turned around and took the second game in the easiest sort of fashion. In the second encounter they drove two of the Pirate flingers from the mound.

Murphy and Britton Both Ready for Fast Battle

By JACK CONWAY.

EDDIE MURPHY and Jack Britton clash in a twelve-round bout at the Pilgrim A. A. tonight. The contest has aroused considerable interest in sporting circles, and should be fast and replete with excitement.

Both Murphy and Britton are known quantities. They have been tested in the pugilistic laboratory, and neither of them has been found wanting. On paper, the bout looks great. It should be every bit as good as the Kilbane-Welsh contest. But, then again, boxing bouts are not fought on paper.

Murphy has a small sized army of followers. Every man, woman and child in South Boston swears by Eddie. He was born in the Peninsular district some twenty-four years ago, and since entering the ring he has done nobly. He has engaged in fifty or more bouts and has always made a good showing. Eddie doesn't believe that Britton is capable of lowering his colors.

Britton and Murphy are both scientific boxers. They depend upon their speed and skill, rather than more strength, to win their bouts. Therefore it looks as though it would be a battle to the bitter end between two skilled masters of the art of self-defence.

BRITTON arrived in this city yesterday. He was accompanied by his manager, "Dumb" Dan Morgan, "K. O." Brown, the famous New York lightweight and Toby Vs. Charley Byers.

The latter hardly needs an introduction. He is known the world over.

Toby is a coal-black boy eighteen years of age. He was picked up in the streets of New York by Stanley Ketchell when this mighty middleweight was in his prime. The "Assassin" made Toby his master and took him all over the country with him. Whenever Stanley fought, little Toby was always in his corner "just to bring good luck" as Ketchell himself used to say.

The former middleweight champion was a very superstitious boxer, and he believed that he was sure to win his bout if Toby was at the ringside. When Ketchell was killed, Toby was left without a master. Morgan got in touch with the boy and offered him employment. And the cripple accepted without a murmur. He has certainly brought good luck to "K. O." Brown, for the blond haired Dutchman has been one of the most successful boxers in the ring during the past two years.

Morgan believes that Britton is the coming lightweight champion. But does anybody ever remember Danny not boosting each of his charges for some kind of a title or other? Joking aside, however, Britton appears to have the goods. He has held Packey McFarland to a draw as has Murphy, while he has beaten Pal Moore, who is well known to New England fight "fans."

It looks like a whirlwind fight as was stated above, provided that both men do what is expected of them. All of which goes to prove that the boxing game, like ring baseball, is not without its big ifs.

THE rest of the card is well arranged.

The semi-final bout is between Charles Silverio, the former amateur heavyweight champion, and Hoppy Hall. Silverio is a rugged fellow, but I do not believe that he will be able to hold Hall at bay for eight rounds. The negro middleweight is a clever boxer, and knows too much about the game for his incompetent opponent.

Two six-round preliminaries have been arranged. They are as follows: Tommy Murphy vs. Gus Leuny. Eddie M. Flynn vs. Charley Byers.

Seek National Rowing Meet for Schuylkill

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—With proper financial encouragement the forty-first annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen can be brought to the Schuylkill River next year.

This announcement was made by Henry Penn Burke, president of the Malta Club, who is also a member of the executive committee of the National rowing classic.

Charles W. Preisendanz, of the Fairmount Club, also a member of the national committee, is an enthusiastic worker in the movement to bring the big regatta here.

Not since 1907 has the national been staged in this city, and then it proved a big success. In the meantime, Spring field, Mass.; Washington, Detroit, Saratoga Lake and Peoria, Ill., have all been visited.

Philadelphia has really been in line for the regatta for the last two years, but it was thought by some of the Schuylkill navy clubs that not enough money could be raised. The cost of promoting a national regatta is approximately $2,000, and this money must come from the various clubs.

Berna Quits Cinder Path for Business

ITHICA, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Tell S. Berna, the Cornell distance runner, who took part in the Olympic games at Stockholm, announces that he is through with running and will settle down to business. He will go to Boston in a few days.

Berna, who gained twenty-six pounds on his trip abroad, is in fine condition. He said it was hard for him to quit running when he was a winner, but he had definitely decided to get through.

PADDY LAVIN LOSES.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Paddy Lavin received a sound drubbing at the hands of K. O. Brennan here. He was knocked through the ropes and outside the ring in the eighth round.

Peanut Vender Now White Sox Recruit

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 27.—"Kid" Smith, the Birmingham pitching phenom, just sold to the White Sox, has had a most meteoric rise in professional ball. Although serving his second year as a hurler, he seems destined to win a regular berth in Ban Johnson's circuit in 1913.

Two years ago Smith was vending peanuts and soft drinks in the park at Birmingham. He frequently went on the mound during batting practice. At first no one paid any attention to him, but gradually he came to the point where the best hitters on the club could do nothing with his delivery. Then Manager Molesworth became interested and discovered Smith was a real pitcher.

Near the close of the 1910 season Molesworth had him attach his signature to a Birmingham contract at $75 per month. When he reported in the Spring of 1911 he worked too hard early in March, and his arm became sore. He did not round to in time and Molesworth sent him to Anniston, Ala., where he fairly set the Southeastern league on fire.

This Spring he was signed up as a regular, and proceeded forthwith to win seven straight games. To date his record is sixteen won and four lost, the best pernonage in the Southern League.

Bill Hart, the veteran hurler and present Southern League empire, predicts a Nice berth for him with the Sox next season.

Twirling Phenom to Join Cleveland Team

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 27.—Jimmy Neher, of the Celoron team, who has pitched phenomenal ball in this vicinity during the present season, will have a chance to get on the Cleveland American League payroll, next year, if he makes good. He will report to the Cleveland team on September 1. Neher has also had offers from the Buffalo International League club.

Abolish Friendship Part of Baseball, Says Cubs' Head

By BILL BAILEY.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Charles W. Murphy, president of the Cubs, sure is an advocate of the strenuous life. There's nothing, strikingly original about this statement. And it probably states a fact which has long been suspected by the members of the National Commission at any rate.

You can always tell when they are in session down in Cincinnati. They open their proceedings by fining the West Side manmate and close with the same motion. Apparently it always prevails.

But the president of the Cubs not only advocates the strenuous life for himself, but he wants his ball players to follow it. And, more than that, he wants the other fellow's players to do the same.

He's there with two propositions which, he thinks, would help the game. Make it more interesting, hurry it along.

* * *

As a starter he would have the spectacle of visiting players visiting with home players when they meet on the diamond abolished. Then he would have the players run to their positions instead of loafing.

"Here is what happens," says the Cub president. "The Boston fellows or the Giants or the Phillies—it doesn't make any difference whom you select—come to the West Side.

"About the first thing that you see is a West Side player and a visiting player over on the side lines shaking hands and visiting.

"That should not be possible. The thousands in the stands are partisan. They feel that there is a lot of rivalry between the players on the various teams and they don't care and do not want to see this hand shaking and the visiting.

"They want to feel that every man on the field would go to the limit to win a ball game. The players will do that, too, but it is sometimes difficult for the fans to realize that this good fellowship can prevail before the game and the men become intense rivals with the sound of the gong.

* * *

"That doesn't apply on the West Side alone. That is a thing you witness everywhere. If a player wants to visit with a player from the other team let them do it before they get in uniform or after the game is over.

"And you can bet if I had my way I'd have a rule making it necessary for the players to get on and off the field in a hurry and have the umpires see that they obeyed such a rule, too. What happens in every ball park in the country now?

"A few minutes before game time the umpires stroll out and they think it is necessary for them to visit awhile. Then the captains come up and turn in the lineup and there is more visiting. Then, after a while, the home team goes to the field.

"The same would go for the coaches, too. You talk of the men who are on the coaching line and they barely move as they walk to and from the bench. It seems to me that they should walk briskly, show lots of life and pep. And make a noise when they get to the box.

* * *

"People like to see a show of life. Ball players are athletes, the best athletes in the world. There should be vim and lots of action in every movement. It would be appreciated by the fans and make the game more popular.

"Let's have rivalry from the moment the men doff their street clothes for the uniform. Let's have action, a show of hustle and hustle every moment after the game begins."

Systematic Training Course for McFarland

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—A systematic training course, unlike anything ever tried before, is the present plan of Packey McFarland for his title bout with Ad Wolgast in New York on October 3. Packey has already begun light indoor work.

Packey's plan, which he terms something new in the way of training, takes in two distinct bouts before the real struggle.

Both of these engagements will be at catchweights, with second-rate boxers built along the lines of Wolgast. The first will take place in Philadelphia within the next two weeks. Joe Hirsch is to be his opponent.

The reason for the change in his training program is because of the weight required in the Wolgast encounter.

Instead of boosting training after the Hirsch fight, he will increase his daily workouts, and by the time his second match is scheduled he expects to be within a few pounds of the weight.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 800,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more of Boston combined.

PELKY HAS SHADE ON SAILOR WHITE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Arthur Pelky, the big boxer from Chicopee Falls, earned the popular decision over Sailor White of Brooklyn in their ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden. It could scarcely be called a fight, as neither man seemed inclined to "mix it." Hardly a blow was struck during the ten rounds. At the end White had a damaged left eye.

Kid Williams of Baltimore showed that he is worthy of a chance at Coulon's crowd by disposing of Kid Kelly of New Orleans in nine rounds.

Young Jeffries, the New Jersey featherweight, conceded seven pounds to Harry Stone and held him to a draw.

Hap Myers Is After Base Stealing Record

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 27.—Hap Myers has stolen sixty bases since joining the Spokane Club of the Northwestern League.

With seven more weeks to play he may turn into a better record than the big leagues showed last season when Ty Cobb had eighty-three in the American and Beecher eighty in the National.

Myers has twice tried to steal on Bert Whaling, who has been sold to the Boston Nationals, and lost out both times.

DUCHESNE DEFEATS HEYWOOD BRIGGS

FALL RIVER, Aug. 27.—Tommy Duchesne won the main bout at the Troy Club meeting, beating Heywood Briggs, the colored boxer from Brockton, in ten fast rounds. It was all Duchesne after the fourth, Briggs apparently being satisfied to stay the limit.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Husband, sed Ma to Pa wen he calm hoam last nite, I want you to be prepared to meet one (1) of the nicest ladies that ever I had the plesbur of inviting to my house. It wud do yure hart good, sed Ma, to jest listen to her like way of speaking. She is one of that noebel band of wimmin, sed Ma, that is bound to shake off the shackles of individual ty-ranny of man, & rise to the hites to which all wimmen is entitled, sed Ma.

You dount say so muchy-muchy, sed Pa. What is the naim of this modern Jones of Arks, sed Pa. Owing to the recent shake-up in the police department, Pa sed, I hate to be a gambler, but I wud like to lay five to one that she is a suffreget. Surely, wife, sed Pa, you dount mean to tell me that you wud ask me to help entertain one of them wimmen voters. I am afrade that I might git a look at her during the first course and choke on a fishbone, Pa sed.

Choke? sed Ma.

Yes, sed Pa—choke willingly and gladly. There is few worse fates in this world than choking on a fishbone or a wishbone, sed Pa, but I wud gladdly choose eether of these deadly ends than to sit & chat through a dinner with a suffreget.

I never met but one suffreget, sed Ma. This gurl is one of the finest ladies that I ever had the plesbur of inviting to my house. You have these earnest young ladies wrong, husband, sed Ma. They believe in standing for a principal all the way. I am sure you will luv this suffreget. You are one of Nature's noblemen, sed Ma. As sure as the rain falls to the earth you will fall for the principals that this gurl ex-pounds.

Jest then Ma's frend exim in. I dident think Pa was going to like her until I saw how butiful she was. Her hair was kind of golden sunshine like, & her cheeks was like the red, red rose. Her lips wasent very pale, eether & she had on a red dress.

My dear Miss Jones, sed Ma, I want you to meet my husband.

Pa was awful nice & politte; he looked at Ma's frend & you can bet pure life she was as pritty as a peach.

Won't you exim oover here & sit by this open window? sed Pa. If you sit on this sofa where the breze cums in from the street you will notis that the breeze is blowing the curtains all oover the room, Pa sed. It was in such a bower as this that all them ancient Greek Gods made love to their Greek goddesses, out in the moonlight, out among the shades, sed Pa.

I dont think you look much like a Greek god, sed Ma's frend.

I sed that I dosent think you look like a Greek god, sed Ma's frend. Men in them days all looked like statues, sed Ma's frend. Now they are all fat. Fat people shuddesnt vote, she told Pa.

Well, sed Pa, may-be you are rite. I suppoas you are like the rest of the suffry-gets, working for the grate & lonely Theodore. But let me tell you sumthing, Pa sed. I am for big fill Taft, & this is my motto: Nobody loves a fat man, but lots of folks are ready to vote for one.

Cruel Sport.

Benevolent Party—Don't you think fishing is cruel sport?

Angler—Cruel? Well, I should say so. I've sat here three days and not had a bite; been nearly eaten up by gnats and stung by two wasps, lost my pocket knife in the river and the sun has taken all the skin off the back of my neck.

A Word to Women on Health Matters

Women are generally careful about the state of their health, and they are apt to make good use of remedies known as disease preventatives. Germicides and antiseptics are included in this class, but the greatest care should be exercised in using any which contain poisons, unless prescribed by a physician.

By reason of its absolute safety and its beneficial results, physicians generally have strongly recommended Tyrrell's Antiseptic Powders. It is unequalled as a preventative of contagious diseases, unsurpassed as a douche and highly efficacious in avoiding infection, healing diseased tissues, ulcers and delicate membrane passages. Liberal and delicate for deodorizing sick rooms and general disinfecting purposes. A twenty-cent package makes 2 gallons standard solution. Sold by druggists everywhere. Ask your doctor or send for our booklet. J. S. Tyrrell Chemist, Washington, D. C.

"You Wouldn't Know the Dear Girl Now"

Copyright, 1912, by the National News Association

By Nell Brinkley

THE same Betty—that you've been seeing up and down "the av'nyuh" and in the smart tea-rooms—you're perfectly likely to run across perched on a pasture fence with her arms full of "roastin' ears," a sun-bonnet on the back of her head, her hair brushed away from her forehead to show you the FOREHEAD you never dreamed she had, a pink gingham gown spread fan-wise on the grey fence and a little porker with a wistful smile and a pleading voice below her. For sometimes such maids are very sensible in the vacations they take.

Hunting a Husband

No. 29—Dr. Haynes Offers to Take the Widow in His Car to the Country and She Gladly Accepts

ASLOWLY convalescing child, is always difficult to manage, and Jean Minor was no exception to the rule.

Indeed, she was more fretful than is the child who recuperates normally, for on alternate days the little girl had a slight rise of temperature, accompanied by a headache, and without understanding the cause of her depression, she was discouraged and unhappy.

Her mother, too, was suffering from the reaction which follows any keen anxiety. Most mothers know how flat, stale and unprofitable life seems when the distressing danger that menaced a dear one is past, and yet the relieved patient does not regain strength as quickly as one thinks she should.

At first Beatrice was overwhelmed with a sense of joyous relief as she appreciated that Jean was not critically ill, and in imagination she saw the child running about, well and strong, in a few days. But as day after day dragged its scorching and enervating length away, and the small patient remained pale and languid, nervous and irritable, the mother felt that peculiar discouragement that will not be reasoned away.

A Friendly Offer

When Dr. Haynes prescribed change of air for Jean, Beatrice wrote to Helen Robbins, saying that she had decided to leave town as soon as it was safe for the little girl to be moved, but that she did not feel like taking board or a cottage for the Summer in any place which she had never seen. Therefore, she would prefer running out to Pleasanton, where Helen had her country home, to inspect the locality before making definite plans to sojourn there for the remainder of the heated term. Helen replied immediately, urging Beatrice to bring the children and spend a few days with her.

"We have an abundance of room," she wrote, "and the rest will do you good and give you an opportunity to look over the ground out here."

The invitation gave Beatrice food for thought. It would be a convenience, she felt, to make the suggested visit, but, in the circumstances, she shrank from putting herself under obligations to Helen. The widow appreciated that her friend would resent hotly, if she knew it, the fact that "Uncle Henry" was her suitor, and, as long as this was the case, she did not feel that it would be quite fair to accept Helen's hospitality without acknowledging the truth. This she was not willing to do, for she had not decided definitely to take Henry Blanchard as a husband. If Helen knew the facts there would be no chance for the widow to temporize further. If she were eventually to marry Blanchard, Helen, remembering that her friend had accepted her invitation and kept the truth from her, would feel that Beatrice had not been above making a convenience of her, and that would put the widow in an uncomfortable position.

While Jean's mother mused on these things, Dr. Haynes came to pay his daily visit to the small patient. When he remarked before leaving that "the child was doing as well as she could until she got the fresh country air," Beatrice asked him to stay for a few minutes, and led him into the drawing room, that she might talk to him of her plans. She told him of the cottage and hotel of which her friend had written, but added that she did not wish to decide upon either one until she had seen the village in which they were situated.

The Doctor Approves

"To tell the truth," she said, with the frank manner that won for her the reputation of childlike sincerity, "I cannot afford to pay a large price for hotel bills. And, as I feel that I should take my maid with me anyway, it seems to me that it would be cheaper to take the furnished cottage, for then Mary could be maid-of-all-work and assist in the care of the children, as she does here in town."

The doctor nodded approvingly. "Yes," he agreed, "and as you need care for yourself, too, you need your maid, for you are tired out."

"And," said Beatrice, "if we have our own cottage, the children will have more freedom, and need not be dressed up in their best, as they must be in a hotel."

"Quite right!" affirmed the physician. "And you want to see the locality before going out to stay?"

"That's just it," said the widow, eagerly. "Helen Robbins has asked me to spend some days with her, but I cannot impose thus upon her. But do you think it would be safe for me to leave Jean for one day? If so, I can take an early train to Pleasanton and get back that night."

The doctor looked thoughtfully. "Why, yes," he said, "the child would be safe with Mary, but it would be a warm and wearing trip for you. Mrs. Robbins, hospitable soul, has honored me by asking me to spend a fortnight with them later on. I have promised, however, to run out in my car and take lunch with them some day before then."

Beatrice suspected what the next question would be, and held her peace hopefully.

"I tell you what let's do!" exclaimed the man as the idea that had already dawned in the widow's mind burst upon him. "Write to Mrs. Robbins and tell her that I am going to take you out in my motor day after tomorrow. We can lunch with her, you see, and then you and she can go over the furnished cottage together and you can make up your mind how you like it, while I, unknown to her, will make mental observations as to how the place will suit the small patient. I understand that it is in the northern part of the State, and the air ought to be good, but I prefer to judge of the matter for myself. With Jean in her present state of health we must get her where there is no malaria."

A Short Run

"What time must we start in the morning?" asked Beatrice, after she had expressed herself as delighted with the scheme. "I would want to have the little girl up and dressed before I go away. You are sure it is safe to leave her?"

"Of course!" exclaimed the man with a touch of impatience. "We do not have to go until 10 o'clock. I understand that the run can be made easily in less than two hours, but we will allow a little more time and surely get there in time for luncheon. You will be back here by your dinner hour. I will look the route up on my road map. Meantime you communicate with Mrs. Robbins. I must hurry off now, and, unless Jean is worse—(which, by the way, she won't be)—I'll not be in tomorrow, for I will crowd as much work as possible into the day, as I am to be away the next. I will be here at 9:45 the day after tomorrow, Thursday, so that I can see the child before we start. That will make you feel easier, I know," he added, with his pleasant smile.

As he went down the hall he looked into the bedroom in which Jean, in a great chair, was playing with her dolls.

"Good-bye, little Princess!" he called gaily. "On Thursday I'm going to take mother away for a few hours to see about a pretty place in the country for you to go this Summer."

The child's face lighted with a happy smile. "Oh, fank you, Dr. Haynes!" she said.

"And I, too, thank you, doctor" said Beatrice as she followed him to the door of her apartment. You are doing me a great favor!" Her voice was soft and low, and her eyes full of feeling. But the doctor scarcely looked at her.

"Oh, nonsense!" he exclaimed, in a matter of fact tone. "It is a pleasure for me to do it, for I have grown very fond of that little girl of yours!"

Kind as the remark was, Beatrice was conscious of a vague regret as she appreciated that, perhaps, after all, it was only for the child's sake that he was going to so much trouble.

THE HOUSEHOLD PRISONER

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

WHEN women with high hair and high voices get up to talk about the Prisoner of the Home they invariably represent that prisoner as a woman.

They make of her kitchen dress a corset's garb, and mold her biscuit cutter and dishpan into manacles, and of the chopping bowl make a big ball which they chain to her feet.

There may be homes in which such conditions exist, but there are as many more in which the husband is the prisoner, and his fetters are made of what his wife calls "love."

If she doesn't love him, he can do as he pleases. If she loves him, when he takes off his hat she hears, "Where have you been?" and when he puts it on he hears, "Where are you going?"

These two questions Mrs. Lysander John Appleton always asks her husband. They are followed by objections, reproaches, more questions, suspicion, jealousy, sometimes detective work, and tears.

Lysander John put on his hat. "Where" asked his wife, "are you going?"

He wanted a breath of air, he said, and was told to stick his head out of the window. He believed he would go to the corner and buy a cigar. There were cigars in his den. He believed he would ask the druggist for a corn cure. There were corn remedies in the house.

He sighed, and subsided, but it was only temporary. He must use diplomacy.

The florist at the corner has some American Beauties. Would she like a bunch? She sniffed in scorn. Would she like a box of candy? She smiled in contempt.

Diplomacy, as a married man understands it, having failed, he must break away.

He picked up a paper, and apparently became so interested that his wife forgot him. She returned to her novel. It was dreary, and she was tired. She slept. She snored. And Lysander John not only saw his opportunity; he heard it.

He tiptoed carefully to the door. He fell over the dog and upset a chair. Still she slept. He tripped on a rug, that being the purpose of rugs, and tumbled over a table, but he didn't waken her. As cautiously and carefully as if he were a criminal trying to escape jail he reached the door, opened it gently and let himself out.

Five minutes later his wife awoke and found the man she loved was gone. She gave pursuit, and found him playing an innocent game of dominoes at the corner drug store.

"Ah," said the other men when they saw Lysander John dragged away, "how that woman must hate her husband!"

Being men, and not knowing women, they did not understand. It was not hate. It was LOVE, as all wives demonstrate it.

Scene, bedroom. Time, 10:30 p. m. Hubby enters softly; wife speaks:

"Henry, did you bring up Willie's croup remedy?"

"Yes, dear."

"And the darling's castor oil?"

"Yes, love."

"And the colic cure?"

"Yes, pet."

"And the peppermint?"

"Yes, birdie."

"And the vapor lamp?"

"Yes, yes."

"And the cup of boric acid to sterilize his spoon, with?"

"Here 'tis."

"And the hot water bag, and his pacifier and bottle of milk?"

"All here."

"Are you sure the dear little angel is wrapped warm enough?"

"Oh, I guess so."

"Well, then, bring me a glass of water, put out the cat, lock the door and open the window at the top, and come on to bed. I'm just fagged out."

Kitchen Wrinkles

For those who have to do much household work this hint will be useful. Before putting the hands into soda-water rub the finger-tips and round the nails with vaseline. The water will not then touch them and make them crack.

A good preparation for the hands is horseradish soaked in hot milk. Scrape a horseradish very finely and allow it to soak in hot milk two hours. Rub this into the hands and allow it to dry, then wash well in soft water.

When ironing circular centrepieces or tablecloths, see that the iron moves with straight grain of the cloth. In this way only is it possible to preserve the circular edge in its true line.

Housekeepers are more or less bothered with the appearance of ants or other insects on their closet shelves, but if these are wiped with water which is hot with cayenne pepper the insects will keep away, says an authority.

A piece of garden hose makes an ideal carpet beater. While stout to dislodge the dust, its flexibility prevents wear and tear given by the ordinary stick or rattan beater.

When pressing a seam or crease in a wool garment use damp wrapping paper instead of a damp cloth between the garment and the iron. The pressing will be more satisfactorily done.

When making pies, before baking, put two or three pieces of macaroni in the centre of the crust, so as to allow the steam to escape without the juice running over the top.

When running dates, figs or raisins through a food chopper add a few drops of lemon juice to prevent the fruit from clogging the chopper.

Washing soda should not be used on china, as it will take off the gilt. Try silver, hot water, but not hot enough to crack the china.

What They Said.

She (who has offered to bear little Jones' part in the coming theatricals)—Now, what's your cue, Mr. Jones?

Jones (puzzled)—My cue?

She—Yes, what they say just before you come on, you know?

Jones—Oh, I see! They always say, "Come on, you silly goat, can't you?"

Politeness.

Little Elmer—Paw, what is politeness?

Professor Bromhead—Politeness, my son, is the art of not letting other people know what you really think of them.

HOW GRACE BENSON BECAME FAMOUS FOR THE BEAUTY OF HER HANDS AND ARMS

Free Prescription That Can Be Prepared at Home Without Expense

Grace Benson, famous for the marvelous beauty of her hands and arms, in a recent interview said: "If I could tell every woman about the prescription that has caused all this talk about my hands and arms they could every one of them make their hands and arms just as beautiful as mine. I am glad to have the opportunity to give my receipt free to the world. Here it is: 'Go to any drug store, get an empty two-ounce bottle, plus a one-ounce bottle of Kuhn's Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kuhn's into the two-ounce bottle, add a quarter of an ounce of witch hazel, then fill with water. Apply night and morning.'

She further said: 'This prescription makes the skin transparent and removes all defects, such as freckles, tan, sun spots, roughness and raddiness. A single application works a marvelous transformation. Where low collars are worn it can be applied to the neck with equally as startling results. It is absolutely harmless, and will positively not obstruct or produce a growth of hair.'

Late Summer Styles

Crepon and Embroidery—White crepon is the material of which this Summer gown is fashioned. The corsage and tunic are delightfully embroidered in a daisy and leaf design, and a distinctive note is struck by the double fold of ninon with which the cuff is ended.

The Fashionable Contee—The very modish little coat of this striking costume is made of satin in a full blue tone. It is cut with short sleeves and a basque from a slightly high waist, being finished with a square collar at the back and a deep fall of lace from the elbow. The gown is of white ninon, the upper portion of the jupe being gathered at the centre.

Stripes and Taffeta—Here is another example of the coatee style cut with longer lines, the sleeves being continued to the wrist and the basque coming well below the hips. The same rich brown taffeta is used for the front panel of the skirt. The buttons are cleverly arranged.

PICTURESQUE DRAPERY

The heavy satin is draped over an underskirt of brocade, the bodice being very simply designed with a deep square cut neck and soft ruchings. The wide lace hat is very becoming for certain types of youthful beauty.

A GOWN IN ROSE AND BLUE

Figured rose-colored taffeta is here trimmed with bands of blue velvet. The corsage is entirely composed of guipure lace, against which the velvet at the waist makes a pleasing note. The bulldog is wearing the latest mode de Chien in collars.

PART I.—(Continued.)

The Danger Moment

FOR a day Sweetwater acknowledged himself to be mentally crushed, disillusioned and defeated. Then his spirits regained their poise. It would take a heavy weight indeed to keep them down permanently.

His opinion was not changed in regard to his neighbor's secret guilt. A demeanor of this sort suggested bravado rather than bravery to the ever suspicious detective. But he saw very plainly by this time that he would have to employ more subtle methods yet ere his hand would touch the goal which so tantalizingly eluded him.

His work at the beach suffered that week; he made two mistakes. But by Saturday night he had satisfied himself that he had reached the point where he would be justified in making use of Miss Challoner's letters. So he telephoned his wishes to New York, and awaited the promised developments with an anxiety we can only understand by realizing how much greater were his chances of failure than of success.

To insure the latter, every factor in his scheme must work to perfection. The medium of communication (a young, untried girl) must do her part with all the skill of an artist and author combined. Women possess a marvelous adaptibility for this kind of work, and this one was French, which made the case still more hopeful.

But Brotherson! In what spirit would he meet the proposed advances? Would he even admit the girl, and, if he did, would the interview bear any such fruit as Sweetwater hoped for? The man who could mock the terrors of the night by a careless repetition of a strain instinct with the most sacred memories was not to be depended upon to show much feeling at sight of a departed woman's writing.

But no other hope remained, and Sweetwater faced the attempt with heroic determination.

The day was Sunday, which ensured Brotherson's being at home. Nothing would have lured Sweetwater out for a moment, though he had no reason to expect that the affair he was anticipating would come off until early evening.

But it did. Late in the afternoon he heard the expected steps go by his door—a woman's steps. But they were not alone. A man's accompanied them. What man? Sweetwater hastened to satisfy himself on this point by laying his ear to the partition.

Instantly the whole conversation became audible.

"An errand! Oh, yes, I have an errand!" explained the evidently unwelcome intruder, in her broken English. "This is my brother Pierre. My name is Celestee Celeste Ledru. I understand English very well. I have worked in families. But he understands nothing. He is all French. He accompanies me for—for the—what you call it? Ivy Leeze. He knows nothing of the hessitness."

Another Trap

Sweetwater, in the darkness of his closet, laughed in his gleeful appreciation.

"Great!" was his comment. "Just great! She has thought of everything—or Mr. Gryce has."

Meanwhile, the girl was proceeding with increased volubility.

"What is this business, monsieur? I have something to sell—so you Americans speak. Something you will want much—ver sacred, ver precious. A souvenir from the tomb, monsieur. Will you give tea—no, that is too leetle—fifteen dollars for it? It is worth—Oh, more, much more to the true lover. Pierre, tu est bete. Teinatu droit sur la chaise. M. Brotherson est un monsieur comme il faut."

This adjuration, uttered in sharp reprimand and with but little of the French grace, may or may not have been understood by the unsympathetic man they were meant to impress. But the name which accompanied them—his own name, never heard but once before in this house, undoubtedly caused the silence which almost reached the point of embarrassment, before he broke it with the harsh remark:

"Your French may be good, but it does not go with me. Yet is it more intelligible than your English? What do you want here? What have you in that bag you wish to open, and what do you mean by the sentimental trash which you offer it?"

"Ah, monsieur has not memory of me," came in the sweetest tones of a really seductive voice. "You astonish me, monsieur. I thought you knew—everybody else does—oh, tout le monde, monsieur, that I was Miss Challoner's maid—near her when other people were not—near her the very day she died."

A pause, then an angry exclamation from some one. Sweetwater thought from the brother, who may have misinterpreted some look or gesture on Brotherson's part. Brotherson himself would not be apt to show surprise in any such noisy way.

"I—I saw many things—Oh, many things"—(the girl proceeded with an admirable mixture of suggestion and reserve)—"that day and other days, too. She did not talk—Oh, no, she did not talk, but I saw—Oh, yes, I saw that she—that you—I'll have to say, sir, monsieur, that you were tres bons amis after that week in Lenox."

"Well?" His utterance of this word was vigorous, but not tender. "What are you coming to? What can you have to show me in this connection that I will believe in for a moment?"

"I have these—is monsieur certaine that no one can hear? I wouldn't have anybody hear what I have to tell you for the world—for all the world."

"No one can overhear."

For the first time that day Sweetwater breathed a full, deep breath. This assurance had sounded heartfelt. "Blessings on her cunning young head. She thinks of everything."

"You are unhappy. You have thought Miss Challoner cold;—that she had no response for your very ardent passion. But"—these words were uttered sotto voce and with telling pauses—"but—I know ver much better than that. She was ver proud. She had a fight; she was no poor girl like me—but she spend hours—hours in writing letters she nevaire send. I saw one, just once, for a leetle minute; while you could breathe so short as that; and it began with Cheri, or your English for that, and it ended with words—Oh, ver much like these: 'You may nevaire see these lines,' which was ver interesting, verse so, and made one want to see what she did with letters she wrote and nevaire mail; so I watch and look, and one day I see them. She had a leetle ivory box—Oh, ver nice, ver pretty. I thought it was jewels she kept locked up so tight. But, non, non, non. It was letters—these letters. I heard them rattle, rattle, not once but many times. You believe me, monsieur?"

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The Fatal Blow

"You say he died of a single blow administered by himself?" asked Scroggs, discussing the decease of Farmer Giles, who passed away suddenly while staying in town.

"Yes, poor fellow!" replied Scroggs.

"But that isn't possible."

"Oh, yes, it is!"

"Well, then, how could he do it?"

"He blew out the gas!"

A Poor Trade

"Well, Mr. Wilson, I has just called on you to see if you'll add your name to the list o' subscribers for a new pulpit Bible for our minister, an' I hope you'll put down something handsome."

"I'll dae nothing of the kind, Mrs. Brown," was the sturdy reply. "It's a poor trade that canna afford to buy its ain tools."

Swift & Company's sales of Fresh Beef, in pounds, for the week ending Saturday, August 17th, averaged 12.16 cents per pound.

Philadelphia, July 8, 1912: "Over a year ago my face broke out all over with pimples which were so unsightly that I was ashamed to go any place in company. I tried many different remedies, but they continued to get worse till I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment in March. From the day I started using Resinol the pimples commenced to disappear. After using one cake of Resinol Soap and one and a half box of Resinol Ointment I was entirely cured." (Signed) Joseph Phillips, 1926 McKean St.

The easy Resinol way to get rid of pimples

JUST bathe your face for several minutes morning and night with hot water and plenty of Resinol Soap. Finish with a dash of cold water to close the pores. Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The action of moisture on the rubber in a tire is insignificant, but its effect on the canvas is serious enough to be worthy of attention. It follows that what really injures the canvas in pneumatic tires is continued dampness. If water is allowed to get into cuts which extend through the tread to the fabric, some such condition of continued dampness will be brought about, for once the moisture enters a cut it has but little chance to evaporate.

Tires should, therefore, be stored in cool places which are perfectly dry. After traveling over wet roads envelopes should always be dried. So likewise after being washed. It is important that tires be washed regularly in order that cuts may be revealed, cleaned and repaired. The best way to wash a tire is to sponge it lightly when fully inflated, using the smallest possible amount of water and drying both tire and rim carefully as soon as the operation is complete.

Percy Martin, managing director of the English Daimler Company, the first makers of automobiles to accept Charles Y. Knight's Silent Knight motor, recently visited the works of the Columbia Knight car in Hartford, Conn. The Columbia Knight has many parts common to the Daimler "28" and Mr. Martin was much interested in the success attained by its builders. One of these cars was turned over to him for use while he is in America.

Last lap in the race for kingships! Send in your votes early for the Revere Beach Mardi Gras contest. The standing of the candidates as announced in yesterday's AMERICAN shows some big men in the lead, but don't be discouraged; let the geniuses work.

The five men receiving the highest number of votes will be crowned kings on the five successive nights of the Revere Mardi Gras, September 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7, with the right of choosing each his queen to ride at the head of the royal procession, which, according to all reports, will be the biggest thing in pageants ever seen this side of New Orleans. The last coupon will be printed Friday and the results announced in Sunday's AMERICAN.

Don't Neglect Your Lungs in Summer

Many people who are afflicted with weak or diseased lungs are apt to neglect them in warm weather because they feel temporarily relieved.

This is just the time to begin a vigorous fight against the disease, as the weakened tissues need stimulation in warm, relaxing weather, and will respond readily.

The best preparation for those afflicted with weak lungs, or chronic coughs, is a Swiss discovery called Sirolin, which has been remarkably successful in this country and abroad.

Information about Sirolin can be secured in this county from the Sirolin Co., 228 W. Broadway, New York City.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STATE STREET, Aug. 27.—Midday—The Boston market was steady at the opening, but prices were irregular. During the morning old Dominion took a spurt and became very active, gaining more than a point in the first hour. Other issues in advance were Calumet & Arizona, Franklin, Boston & Corbin, Nipissing, North Butte and Superior & Boston.

Among stocks to sell lower while those advanced were Butte & Superior, Isle Royale, Massachusetts Mining and Greene-Cananea.

The increased demand for copper metal did not stir copper mining stocks to great activity. Not much public interest was manifested in the market.

The Boston News Bureau says that November copper is selling at the full price of 17¾ cents, and that October, as well as September, will shortly be "sold out." Consumers have declined to new set a price on year-end shipments.

Better Tone at Start.

The New York market opened with a better tone and gains were the rule for active stocks. Most of the advances were fractional, but Canadian Pacific went up more than two points. Its earnings report induced heavy buying in London Union Pacific sold higher and there were gains for some of the specialties, Atchison, the Hill roads, Steel common and others. The rise in Lagerii & Myers continued. It gained more than three points, as did the P. Lorillard issue. American Snuff advanced more than a point, but subsequently lost the gain. Covering in tobacco was the explanation given for the early rise of these issues.

The curb was steady.

There was not much demand for American stocks in London, but their tone was firm.

Financial News in Brief.

Last week's car orders aggregated 3,700 cars, 75,000 tons of rails and about 100 locomotives.

James J. Hill says that the crop outlook in the Northwest is better than it has been for five or six years. "The terminal facilities of the Great Northern," he says, "are sufficient to take care of three times the present amount of traffic."

It is denied at the Louisville & Nashville office in New York that arrangements have been made by that road to buy the St. Louis Southwestern.

It is estimated that when it comes time to move crops in this country that the railroads will need 200,000 more cars than they have.

The gross earnings of the Atchison road for July were $938,000 more than the amount of the corresponding month a year ago. Net July earnings show a gain of $450,000. Chicago and Northwestern net for the month increased $217,000.

George W. Perkins has decided he intends to resign as chairman of the Finance Committee of the International Harvester Company, and he also says he will not serve in connection with the United States Steel Corporation.

There is no Interstate Commerce Commission in Canada to fix railroad rates, and the Canadian Pacific, which last year accumulated a balance of $35,319,004 for common stock dividends, which is equal to 19.62 per cent. on the $180,000,000 outstanding, can charge shippers what it sees fit. This does not suit many farmers in the Canadian West, and a Toronto newspaper which is championing their cause says that C. P. freight charges are "exorbitant and discriminatory." In the course of time the Canadian Pacific may have to face some of the conditions which are untoward for American railroads.

Gross earnings of $123,319,541 are reported by the Canadian Pacific for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1912. This is the largest gross reported in the history of the road and compares with $104,167,806 last year. Total operating expenses were $80,021,298, as against $67,467,977 last year.

Thompson, Towle & Co. quote somebody described as "One who should know" as saying—"Don't be surprised to see Shoe Machinery stock selling 10 points higher, and it will not be due to any settlement of suits or immediate plans, but simply a case of justification of higher prices due to earnings for months breaking all previous records, a situation which is known to people who are willing to dig the stock to the knowledge that eventually the stockholders are going to benefit by the company's great and justifiable prosperity."

Signs of Prosperity.

The aggregate value of the chief crops of five Northwestern States will be more than $500,000,000. The country's entire crop will probably be more than 2,800,000,000 bushels.

A great movement of lumber to the East has begun on the Pacific coast.

There is a great scarcity of harvest hands and unskilled labor is getting the highest pay ever known. Six thousand men given free transportation by the St. Paul road to do construction work for it will be earner crops when they got to destinations.

During this month 275,000 tons of rails have been ordered for delivery next year. Structural steel inquiries in New York are the greatest on record. They amount to a total of 750,000 tons.

Steel mills are working at full capacity and demand for tin plate is taxing manufacturing facilities to the utmost.

Copper Metal Market.

The London copper market opened firm with spot up 1s. 3d. and futures 6s. 3d. higher.

It is estimated that since the buying movement in this country started last week copper sales up to yesterday totalled about 50,000,000 pounds. The price was 17¾ cents. It is estimated by the American Metal Market that August exports will amount to about 60,000,000 pounds and that home consumption will be 67,000,000.

The big brass plants in the Naugatuck Valley in Connecticut, which are among the heaviest copper consumers in the world, have so many orders that it is believed this month will establish a new high production record.

Decline in Cotton.

Cotton opened easy in the New York market at a decline of from 5 to 12 points, due to weakness of cables in connection with a general unfavorable weather map. After the call room selling became pronounced and further losses were sustained. The decline soon reached 15 points for the active months, with very little support save scattered covering by shorts. At the end of fifteen minutes the list was off 11 to 14 points. Futures in Liverpool were easy; spot was quiet there.

POSTAL TO 'DEAD MAN' SAVES HIM FORTUNE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Aug. 27.—A souvenir postal from William Norton, who has been declared officially dead seven years, to James Brew, who was buried five years ago, has saved a fortune for Norton. After Norton disappeared efforts were made to find him to turn over to him the estate of Mrs. Mary Watson, his sister. The estate was finally distributed when the card was received.

The White Star Line Learns Its Great Lesson

The White Star Line has announced its intention to expend more than a million dollars in equipping the Olympic, the surviving sister ship of the Titanic, with cross bulkheads, side bunkers and other appliances for safety.

It is a pleasure to record and commend these improvements as it was a public duty to protest against the lack of them.

The sea monster that stabbed and sunk the Titanic smote its vulnerable sides. The wise Cunarders had foreseen and prepared for that in adding double sides as well as double bottoms to their boats. The Cunarders provide also in the Lusitania and the Mauretania a third side in the lateral coal bunkers which can be made watertight.

It is commendable in the White Star people to have adopted these indispensable improvements.

The longitudinal bulkhead may keep out the water on one side of a pierced boat, but the weight of incoming water lists the ship dangerously to one side and makes the cross bulkhead essential to safety. There should be as many of them as the ship's anatomy can afford.

It is good to know that the White Star people have also learned this valuable lesson.

There is on exhibition in New York a model of that magnificent new German steamship the Imperator. Her decks and sides literally swarm with lifeboats. This necessity for ample lifeboats is the great lesson which the AMERICAN has helped to teach the ocean world.

It is confidently expected that the White Star people will not fail to remember this most vital lesson, too.

If the White Star people had been pleased to receive and adopt long ago the AMERICAN'S earnest plea for sufficient lifeboats for all its passengers the greatest sea tragedy of the century might have been averted. There is yet time to avert another disaster, as prodigious and irreparable.

The AMERICAN, speaking in no thoughtless or casual way, but upon expert authority, assures the White Star and other steamship lines that double bottoms extending into double sides up twenty or thirty feet above water line, the cross bulkheads and side bunkers and an ample supply of reliable lifeboats make up the prime essentials of safety in ocean travel.

All of these—not merely some of them—must come to every ship.

It is worthy of note and of high approval that the White Star Line is making improvements of its own will and without other compulsion than the recommendation of the American Senate's investigating committee and the committee of the British Board of Trade.

But the safety of ocean travel in this advanced era should not be left dependent entirely upon the good will of ship owners.

Laws and statutes should make imperative the specific reforms which wise and thoughtful statesmen have proposed.

On this side of the sea the American Senate before adjournment should have taken ten minutes to pass the AMERICAN'S bill, which had been passed unanimously by the House.

And on the other side, the English lawmakers should by imperative statute compel all masters of steamships to do what the White Star Line has done without any other compulsion than public opinion here.

The Hearst Bill on Federal Incorporation

On March 1, 1907, Mr. Hearst, as a member of the House of Representatives, introduced a bill providing for the Federal chartering of corporations doing an interstate business.

This bill was not merely permissive; it was in practical effect compulsory. It proposed to drive interstate concerns into Federal incorporation by a differential franchise tax that amounted to a heavy fine upon those refusing to comply.

This bill was simple, logical and thorough. It probably reached nearer to the bottom of the trust problem than any other legislation proposed has ever done. Assuming that business combination on a great scale is inevitable and in the main desirable, it undertook to supply a working code for the preservation of what is good in the principle of combination and the elimination of what is bad.

This bill was introduced under the administration of Mr. Roosevelt. But neither Mr. Roosevelt nor the Democratic party in the House or Senate, nor the Republican party in the House or Senate, had been awakened to the need of such a measure at that time.

National experience during the last five years has taught its lesson. The principles embodied in the Hearst bill of 1907, and expounded unceasingly in the Hearst newspapers since that time, have been accepted by multitudes of thinking men. They now stand in sight of realization.

Yet it is to be noted that not one of the national party platforms this year has a plank on the trust platform that can be compared in unflinching explicitness and completeness with the Hearst Federal Incorporation bill.

Mr. Roosevelt is engaged in a heated controversy with ex-Senator Edmunds on the trust question. Mr. Roosevelt has at last arrived at a position that approximates the view taken in the Hearst bill. But Mr. Roosevelt is wrong in saying that "the Progressive platform is explicit" on this subject.

The Progressive platform is not explicit on the trust question. It is hazy. It does, indeed, demand "a strong national regulation of interstate corporations"—and that is well. But it does not squarely face the crucial questions. It does not say that such corporations should be compelled to take out Federal charters. It does not meet the issue of the legal limitation of prices and dividends. It leaves the reader free to suppose that the Progressives intend to propose nothing more than the paltry Perkins doctrine of "publicity."

Mr. Roosevelt should explain his platform.

ON A DIET

By PERCY SHAW

"NO wonder," said the doctor,
As he looked the fat man o'er,
"That you feel a trifle heavy
And without esprit de corps.
You must quickly take to fasting,
For by starving you I can
In a month or so transform you
To a nearly perfect man.

"Scorn potatoes, frown on coffee,
Spurn red meats and tidbits fried,
Cast away cigars and liquors
With a high and mighty pride.
Turn your face from pies and candy,
Put your ban on all things sweet,
And whatever's left, with caution,
You may taste but do not eat.

"In the morning just at daybreak
Run ten miles with gentle sweep,
Mow the lawn before the noon hour,
Drink a glass of milk and sleep;
Cut a cord of wood by sunset,
Go to bed by eight or so,
So you won't be waked or bothered
By the merriment below."

Thirty days the patient suffered,
Then his temper rose within—
"If I've got to die I'd rather
Make the journey fat than thin."
"Please excuse me," said the doctor,
As the victim voiced his rage
In expressive words not suited
To the modest printed page.

"I was very much mistaken,"
Said the doctor with a smile.
"What you need is food a-plenty,
And you need it all the while.
Take a cocktail before dinner,
Munch on candy all you can,
And in thirty days you'll find that
You've become a perfect man."

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

PICTORIAL BOSTON.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Mr. Pennell's alleged failure to find any pictorial beauty in Boston reminds one of those tourists who find Rome to be "so ugly." As a matter of fact, Whistler, Mr. Pennell's tutelary deity, would have gone into raptures of enjoyment in such resplendent beauty as the scene at night from the other side of the river Charles, at Riverbank court, and along that boulevard looking across over Boston. The long lines of lights on the river banks, the curving lights defining the bridges, the dome on the State House blazing against the sky, the vista of illuminations on Corey Hill and other heights about, why, this picture, so far surpasses that of the Thames at night, which was so frequently protrayed by Whistler, as is possible to conceive. It is a scene of far greater scope and variety.

Then take the vista, for instance, from the Common as one emerges to Park square, with the campanile of the "New Old South" silhouetted against the Western sky; especially toward sunset. Another view that cannot but fascinate the eye of the artist is that from the Fens, where the tower of the church in Longwood rises above the masses of the trees. As for the "bits" in the vicinity of Jamaica Pond, along the Newton boulevard, the magnificent tower of the new Catholic college and many other localities in and around Boston, their beauty is absolutely unsurpassed by the points and views and vistas of any other city in the country.
